In issuing the report, Wage and Hour Administrator Robert D. Moran pointed out that while the Division's 960 Compliance Officers conducted 55% of all Government investigations under these laws, they accounted for $2 million or 71% of the total back wages found due nearly 14,000 or 62% of the total number of laborers and mechanics found underpaid. ## Officers Request Promotions of Rank Without Regard to Race

The progress report on the grievances of Durham's black policemen received sharp criticism when read before the city council here Monday night by City Manager L. Harding Hughes Jr. The report, read before a crowd of some 400 citizens including most of Durham's 25 black officers, consisted partly of a statistical comparison of the rank of blacks on the Durham force and in other North Carolina cities. Hughes report was first questioned by Councilman John S. Stewart, who told the council, "What other cities in North Carolina have done is not germane; it doesn't alleviate the situation at hand. Referring to the city manager's progress report, Sgt. James W. Price, a spokesman for the black officers, said, "I don't know where he got his statistics, but we have some of our own." Price requested a committee to go over the report. He said over one half of it "is untrue, and we can't go along with it." Durham's 25 black policemen first presented a list of grievances to the council committee-of-the-whole two weeks ago.
