

Congressman Hawkins Declares Need of Summer Jobs for Youth Still Exists

The 100,000 Summer Jobs Youth Program heralded by President Nixon is only a drop in the bucket toward the actual need of one million jobs. This is a political publicity ruse and does not begin to realistically meet the needs of our youth. It is a placating move. Los Angeles county alone has need for 35,000 summer youth jobs and will have only one-half of that need met. Symbols and tokens will not relieve the growing pressures of our youth. I have started a series of congressional hearings across America to measure the depth and extent of the Summer Jobs Youth Program. The first hearing was held in Los Angeles and the second in San Francisco. Other hearings will be held in other densely populated urban cities.

The testimony presented at these two hearing was by experts who service our youth programs. These experts consistently pointed out the need for many more summer jobs for our youth. Church groups, social service organizations and governmental agencies all agree that the two major urban areas in California could realistically absorb over 50% of the 100,000 additional summer jobs advanced by President Nixon.

This Summer Jobs Youth Program is an attempt to substitute a band-aid when surgery is needed. One million jobs, which doubles the present one-half million jobs being proposed by Nixon, is more realistic, and will more adequately meet America's need for summer jobs for our youth.

The President made no remarks relative to supportive services, such as recreation and transportation for the Summer Jobs Youth Program. These two elements are vital. The exclusion of youth between the ages of 18 and 20, is also a very grave error.

I am concerned with realistically meeting the needs of our youth in our Summer Jobs Youth Program. The newspaper headlines of last week "100,000 More Youth Job Opportunities" was deceptive and misleading.

The participation and attendance of the community at the hearings held in Los Angeles was extensive. This demonstrated that the concept of community involvement is an actuality. The realization that the President's program is insufficient and wanting, motivated a massive turnout of community people.

It is apparent that our youth are being short-changed; their needs are being ignored. Job tokenism is prevailing and our youth are being substituted out. There is an actual need for more than one-million summer job slots and for meaningful supportive service.

Federal Grant Enables A&T to Seek Solutions to Transit Woes

GREENSBORO - Carless cities, dial-a-buses, and pool taxis might sound like science fiction to the average person, but these and other dynamic concepts for getting people from one place to another are becoming rather commonplace to officials of the A&T State University Transportation Institute.

Backed by more than $262,000 in federal grants, the institute, which opened less than a year ago, is becoming a vital force in the solving of mass transportation problems in the Piedmont area and the state.

Headed by Arthur Saltzman, a dynamic young graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the institute, has already launched an ambitious program of training, research and service projects.

"One of our most important accomplishments thus far is the fact that we have established rapport with a lot of state and local officials. We are even starting to make contacts in the communities themselves."

A significant step was taken early last month when the institute played host to more than 60 elected officials, governmental and private leaders in the transportation, in a conference on transportation goals and objectives for the Piedmont Triad Region.

ADD-ON COOKERY

A new stand-up cook book that is a stand-out for expert-tested recipes keeps on growing as long as you keep cooking. Issued by the Woman's Day Magazine Kitchen Staff, the 400-page cook book comes with 2,000 recipes bound into a loose-leaf cook book that stands up by itself and has plenty of unused space to grow on. Recipes can be added monthly from the Collector's Cook Book section of Woman's Day and the Kitchen Staff is also planning to issue extra cook book supplements which appear in every issue of Woman's Day Magazine.

The 2,000 recipes are the best of the 6,500 that have so far appeared in Woman's Day according to the Kitchen Staff, who consulted the mail responses of the magazine's readers as well as their own taste buds and expertise in nutrition and home economics in making final selections.

This book, the "Woman's Day Collector's Cook Book," can be ordered directly by coupon from the magazine or from Fawcett Books, Dept. 871, Lake Success, Great Neck, N.Y. 10021, for $8.80, which includes postage. The regular edition is bound in washable, tear-resistant vinyl. A De Luxe edition is also available in a vibrant red "wet look" vinyl slipcase for $11.80, including postage.

In addition to the recipes themselves, which include many originals as well as old favorites, the book also includes sections on buying and storage, nutritional meal planning, and low-calorie dishes. For the novice or the expert.
