

INTERVIEW

By

This week's interview column is dedicated to Walter G. Rhodes. Members of St. Joseph's A.M.E. Church approached me several times during the past few weeks and asked me to talk to Rhodes. This man apparently means so much to his community that they could not wait any longer to show their appreciation for his deeds.

Rhodes is hailed to be one of those disappearing breeds of men who serve their community dutifully for the sheer pleasure of service. His list of achievements speak for themselves.

Rhodes was born in Richlands, North Carolina but spent his childhood and part of his adult life in Wilmington. In 1939 he moved to Durham. He presently resides at 508 Price Avenue with his wife, Gladys H.

Mrs. Rhodes is a teacher at W. G. Pearson Elementary School. Rhodes is employed by Pappa Jacks on E. Pettigrew Street.

Rhodes is past president of the Durham Business and Professional Chain and past superintendent of the Bible School Class. He also served as president of the Durham Usher's Union.

Rhodes currently serves as a steward of St. Joseph's A.M.E. Church, 2nd term as President of the Usher's Board of the church, President of the Berean Bible Class, member of the Durham chapter of the NAACP, and member of the Durham Business and Professional Chain.

Rhodes has also been connected with the Cub Scouts as Cub Scout Master, Boy Scout Master, and an Explorer advisor.

The Carolina Times feels it is men like Walter G. Rhodes who play influential parts in the development of our youth and our city. Durham needs more men like this to become the great city for which it has the potential.

Rhodes' friends and neighbors feel that he does more than his part selflessly and with a sense of dedication to the public, his family, and his church.

For this gift of giving, The Carolina Times, your friends, and your church thank you.

Roberta Flack to Be Featured On 'Artists in America' Program

Roberta Flack is a Washington, D. C., singer and pianist who represents everything that's creative and exciting about contemporary American popular music. A portrait of Roberta Flack as an artist and a person will be seen on University Television, Tuesday at 9:30 p.m. on WUNC-TV, Channel 4 on ARTISTS IN AMERICA: ROBERTA FLACK

Her repertoire of pop, blues, jazz, spirituals, rock, and folk, is too various for Roberta Flack to be typed as a soul singer. But her music exemplifies her own definition of "soul" - "a very personal thing that shows in a person's ability

-- white or black -- to arouse the innermost emotions of another person." Excerpts from ten contemporary songs, alternately joyous and plaintive, form the fabric of the film. The songs -- with their emphasis on human relationships -- run parallel to the artist's own personal philosophies and priorities.

Her home base for reaching an audience's emotions is an upstairs room built especially for her at Mr. Henry's, an intimate Washington night club. Here the camera captures her and her enthusiastic audience as they swing together on "Ain't No Mountain High Enough." Producer Cherrill Anson follows Miss Flack from the night club scene to her moving appearance at the Newport Jazz Festival and backstage to a New York recording session for her third major album.
