INTERVIEW

By John Myers

Casey Ides is five feet, six inches tall, stockily built, wears a black patch over the left lens of her glasses, and is probably known by no one in Durham.

But Casey is known, by jumpers, by throwers, officials, and judges from New Zealand to Bakersfield, California. Casey is a track fan. The Pan Africa-USA Tract Meet brought her to Durham.

Casey worked for Civil Service in the Social Security Payment Department for fifteen years. During that time, she averaged 72 hours a week. "After the war, people were scarce. We could never train enough people to fill all the openings we had. Our usual week was 11 hours on weekdays, 9 hours on Saturdays, and an optional 7 hours on Sundays.

I saved every cent of my overtime during those fifteen years, knowing someday, how I would use it. I planned all my vacations around major track meets and would have quit my job rather than miss the Olympic Games."

When Casey retired, she started traveling. This past year she covered the West Coast from San Diego to Oregon, nine times, following the runners. "My father was a woman's track coach and although I, due to an affliction of my back, could not actively participate, I became an ardent spectator at an early age."

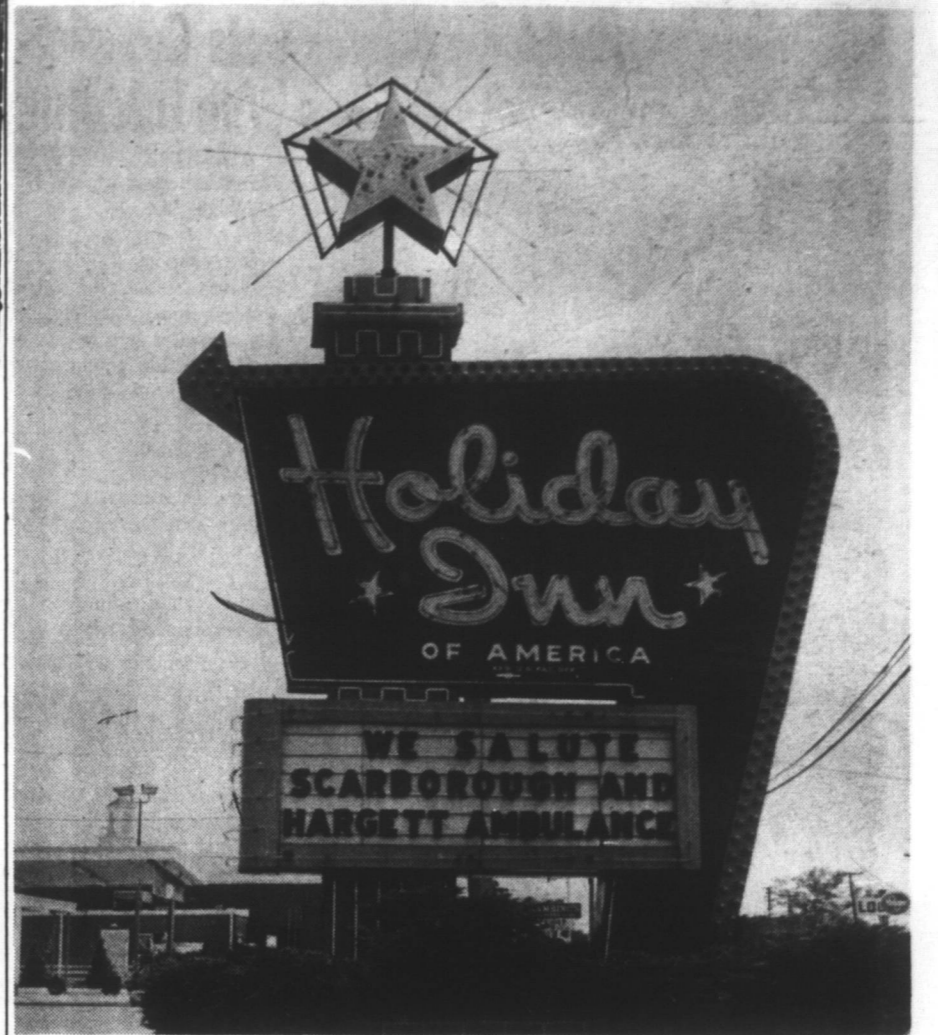

Casey becomes almost violent when you mention the lack of interest in women's track. "Why that damn Los Angeles Times absolutely refuses to admit that there such a sport as women's track. They will not even look at an article I do on it. But they sure as hell grab it when I do it on a man's event."

Casey tells the intimate happenings of track, the things usually missed by the eye of the camera. "It was the British Commonwealth Games in 1970 when Debbie Brill, the only western hemisphere six foot high jumper, took first place. The Queen was awarding the medals and up came Debbie.

The Queen is a small woman, and Debbie is a rather tall girl, therefore, making an interesting looking couple to begin with. The Queen started to put Debbie's medal over her head, around her neck, when she got the catch in the ribbon caught in Debbie's hair. Being a mother herself, the Queen did not panic in the least. She simply asked Debbie to lean closer, stretched, looked, and finally managed to lower the medal around Debbie's neck. It was Debbie's first international competition and she was a bit shaken by the whole matter."

In 1968 at the Olympics in Mexico City, Casey was having transportation problems. The place she was staying was across the city from the stadium, and every time she tried to get a bus back to her hotel, she could never find one headed that way. The Olympic Village, where the athletes and judges were staying was only two blocks away, however, and Casey came up with a unique way of getting to the games. "All the judges had name tags on their coats say (Continued on page 10A)

Scarborough & Hargett Ambulance Service Tops

July 16-17 marked the extravaganza of the Pan Africa U. S. A. International Track meet in Wallace Wade Stadium at Duke University. The S & H Ambulance Service was called by an executive of the American Red Cross soliciting the aid of the personnel to man and aid station as well as having a standby with ambulance. A tent was also provided by the S & H Funeral Home Inc. The service was rendered, and due to the efficiency of the service rendered to the many of victims of the heat and wasp stings on both days The Holiday Inn West saluted the S & H Ambulance Service for a week.

Those in attendance at the aid station were J. A. Carter, asst. mgr at S&H, B. T. McMillion Registrar at N. C. Central University, Mrs. Holloway and J. T. Shepherd. The ambulance attendants were James Williams and James Walker who were most efficient in the four calls made to the East Gate of the Stadium.

ON BUYING BONDS

The Treasury Department reports that Americans bought more Series E and H U.S. savings bonds during the first half of 1971 than in any six-month period since 1955. The bond purchase totaled $2.8 billion.

LIGHT FOILS CRIME

A recent survey of 1,300 police chiefs confirmed the importance of adequate lighting in the war against crime and vandalism. A drop in crime was reported by 85% of the chiefs when lighting was improved. Take precautions to protect your home against burglary. Lighting experts at GTE Sylvania Incorporated recommend: setting several lights to timers to go on at dusk; leaving your backyard well lighted, and keeping a porch light burning when you're away from home. It's easy for a home owner to take a few safety precautions and help prevent crime.
