The history of the church extends to 1980 when a small group met with the Rev. L. D. Twine to form a church. Other ministers who have served since that time, include Reverends I. H. Russell, J. Lee White, George Avant, W. T. Nelson, C. A. Kearns, J. A. Cannon, and J. W. Smith.

Under the leadership of the Rev. Cannon, Homecoming Speaker, the church was relocated at its present site in 1949. The construction of a new sanctuary, and an educational building began during the pastorate of the Rev. J. W. Smith. Formal dedicatory services were held October 20.

Union Baptist In The News

By MABLE SHAW The church offers us the opportunity to share and inheritance of Christian Scholarship which removes the question mark from the horizon of life.

In any age the church brings to bear its message of hope and faith, not that all questions are answered one-two-three, in a finished package. But that, because of consecrated scholars who through the church have found the answer to God and have reached them in books of history, prophecy, and the gospel message, we today may have insight and wisdom available from no other source. But this is unclaimed heritage until each of us delves into these records with the source book of our religion to find there the means for facing life's question marks and straightening them into exclamation points which symbolize the greatness of God in the world.

From the church we have the heritage of the opportunity for free worship. We have the great opportunity of finding our way to God through the church.

INLAND 'SEAFOOD' North Carolina's "seafood" industry isn't confined to the coastal area. Such land-locked sections of the state and the Piedmont and Mountains are moving more strongly into the business. Catfish farming, for example, is being explored as a possible new industry in the Piedmont. The Mountain area, with its abundance of water, is the site of a $2 million trout industry. New interest is being shown in trout farming rather than depending on the natural fish population to supply the market.

Today's Scene At Hillside

By AUDREY KEE

During this time of year, students (seniors) have the responsibility of making many decisions; that will be by life's vocation? What college will I attend? Is a Junior College for me? Should I go to a technical or Business School? These are a few of the many questions that seniors have to answer.

Hillside High School is very fortunate in having three very competent guidance counselors to aid in every possible way. Mr. Bobby Lawrence, senior counselor; Mrs. Marion S. Smith, junior counselor; and Mrs. Edith M. King, sophomore counselor, are appealing to the students to come into their offices and seek the necessary guidance. This is the time SAT

Highlights At Durham HI

By MONICA GUNN

Gunnie here reporting to you the latest happenings from Durham High. To all my readers I'd like to make a public apology. For the past several weeks I have been telling about the coming of Joe Frazier to Durham High. Last week, the Student Government was notified that Joe would not be able to keep his engagement for the Nov. 19th. According to his manager, Joe is in training for an upcoming fight. So for those who had gotten your hopes up in seeing Joe Frazier, I'm sorry to say "he can not show."

Twice I've congratulated Mr. Rogers on winning the city and district Teacher of the Year Award. Now let me once again congratulate him on the winning of the state Teacher of the Year Award. It was decided in Student Council that this year the coronation of Miss Durham High will be combined with Christmas Ball. Good luck to Carolyn Deloris Harris who I'll be competing for the title of Miss Durham Business and Professional Chain. This contest is scheduled for Nov. 19th at Hillside High School. Since it is now growing close to the time we're supposed to 'deck the halls' and stuff like that, the Durham High School Marching Band has committed itself to par-

Long-Range Study of Pill Shows Good Safety Record

If the birth control pill causes any major health dangers to women who take it, they have not shown up in any significant numbers in the first long-range study of the pill. In fact, birth control pills set "a good record of safety" in a 14-year survey of about a half-million California women. Women taking the pill tested out about the same physically as women not taking it, according to the survey recently reported in a scientific exhibit at a convention of the American Medical Association. "Among about 500,000 women surveyed since 1956, we found no major problems in prescribing this form of contraception," said Dr. Edward Tyler, Medical Director of the Greater Los Angeles Family Planning Center. The study further shows the pill has provided a bonus by clearing up depression and family problems for
