A PARABLE FOR
SCOUTMASTER

By E. L. KEARNEY

And in those days, behold, there came through the gates of the city a scoutmaster from afar. And it came to pass as the days went by that his troop prospered. New boys sought membership in his gang, and his Scouts advanced to higher ranks.

And those scoutmasters in the city whose troops were dead of inaction and those who spent their days passing out alibis, were astonished. They said one to the other "What the dickens? How doth he get that way?" And they crabbed and were exceedingly sore in the head. And it came to pass that one day many of them were gathered together. And a soothsayer came among them, and he was one who knew his onions. And they questioned him, saying "How is it that this stranger among us is showing us up for a bunch of spinach?" And the soothsayer made answer unto them saying "He of whom you speak is one hustler. While ye sit by your firesides and wish for a grade A for your troop, he is out with his boys bringing in the bacon.

"He runneth his troops on the budget plan and when it is time for reregistration, he payeth for his entire troop and addeth to it subscription BOYS LIFE. While ye, when the time is long past, cry aloud, Behold, we cannot reregister, we have not the necessary coppers.

"He praises his troop committee in a loud voice, saying, 'Verily, they are swell guys,' and he gives them work to do, saying, 'This is our job,' and he getteth it done.

"He has taken unto himself two angels: aspiration and perspiration. He knoweth whereof he speaketh and he worketh with vigor. Verily, I say unto you, go ye and do likewise."
