tion Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation will be held December 1, 2, 3, at the Durham Motel-Hotel. Convention Manager, Dr. Lavonia Allison from North Carolina Central University, and President-Elect, Dr. Michael L. Pollack, Wake Forrest University are presently making final preparations for the three-day meeting. The Executive Board, headed by President Miss Margaret Duncan of St. Mary's College, voted to change the convention days to a Friday, Saturday, Sunday sequence. It was thought that this would give public school personnel and students member an opportunity to spend more time at the convention. The convention will begin at 2:30 p.m. Friday and end at 12:00 noon Sunday. This year's program will include many new features. On Sunday afternoon, December

Foundation Aids Against Sickle Cell Disease

WHITE PLAINS, NY-One of America's oldest voluntary health organizations is helping one of the nation's newest groups to get started, Joseph Nee, president of the National Foundation-March of Dimes, and Dr. Charles F. Whitten, chairman of the National Association for Sickle Cell Disease, announced here today.

"In making a substantial grant to the Association," Nee said, "the March of Dimes is interested soley in promoting the development of the National Association for Sickle Cell Disease along lines determined by its officers and direc tors. Sickle cell disease affects black people primarily. We agree with Dr. Whitten and his associates that programs for testing and counseling individuals and for educating the nation about the disease should be developed by a national black organization. We are therefore glad to give our support in the form of this grant."

National Championship To Attract Thousands

To the thousands of football fans who will be watching the Pelican Bowl or what is being hailed as the Black Football Championship for 1972, as well as the many profession al scouts observing, remarkable athletes will be vying with each other to become the champions in the first Pelican-Bowl inaugural contest at University's Wallace Wade Stadium.

With varying combinations of speed, power, balance and along with the incentive to prove which may be the better team, the Eagles of North Carolina Central University and Grambling Tigers will provide interesting feat. In the words of many observers, Central will have to play its best game this year to beat Grambling and Grambling will to be

For the third year in a row, sports fans around the country have been watching Grambling football on Grambling TV's network. It was created specifically for the more than 25 million black people and has been syndicated on more than 100 stations weekly bythe Black Associated Sports Enterprises, Beverley Hills, California. It has reached a peak in popularity and is unique in that it was created for the important black consumer market, but deliveres a large share of the non-black sports aud-

Though its hour long program of game highlights in color, edited on location and fed directly to markets, ,including 75 of the top 100 black consumer markets in the United States and it is ready for showing the next day. Stop action, slow motion,, close-ups instant replay, directional microphones and background music are employed for added interest as a part of each week-

Sports enthusiasts of the Raleigh-Durham area and other areas have been keyed up watching these outstanding football players from Grambling College, Today, the name Grambling College brings forth thunderous applause and resounding yells. Its name has been byword across the land, a shining symbol of pragmatic education, wholesome community service and good intergroup relations. The up hill climb has been long and difficult but it has moved from a two-year program to a fouryear program, Grambling College now lies nestled among 340 acres in the heart of the Town of Grambling with fifty permanent buildings including a stadium, large farm, spacious playgrounds and all othe. collegiate appointments. Its valuation is in excess of $32 mil-

The College now has four divisions with numerous offerings in each: Division of Education; Division of Applied Science and Technology, The Division of Liberal Arts and the Division of General Studies.

About 4,000 students a year and over 15,000 graduates everywhere can tell you anytime, what the applause and yells are all about.

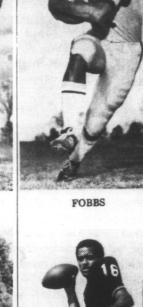

What about those outstanding players who will be competing against NCCU's Eaglesthis team that has sent more active professional players to the pros than any other school or university except Notre Dame?

The fans will eagerly watch to see if NCCU Eagles can contain the passing arm of senior quarterback Mat Reed the running of Lee Fobbs and running back Rodney Tureaud who has gained some 1,081 yards in 7 games. Do not overlook Tight end Oliver Alexander with his uncanny pass receiving and blocking skills, or Andrew Jackson, Grambling's great offencive guard.

Of course Grambling Tigers will have to do some containing on their own. Central has Garvin Stone, an outstanding quarterback and that great receiver, Jason Caldwell, split end, and who has been named to the Newspaper Enterprise Association's second team All-American list. Running back Jefferson Inmon is the leading rusher in Mid Eastern Athletic Confernece (MEAC) as well as the leading scorer. Inmon has gained 1,081 yards in 10 Continued on page 10A

Pioneer Health Educator To Be Honored Dec. 10

A portrait of Dr. Walter J. Hughes, a pioneer in North Carolina health education, will be unveiled in ceremonies at 3 p.m., Sunday, December 10 in North Carolina Central University's health education build-

Dr. Hughes was the first Negro health officer to serve with the North Carolina State Board of Health, joining the staff of the board in 1920 as a direct result of a grant from the Rosenwald Foundation. His assignment was specifically in the area of veneral disease control and education. and his work and techniques are mentioned in major texts in that field.

Dr. Hughes later became a nember of the staff of the North Carolina School Health Coordinating Service. In this capacity, he made major contributions to the health of the school population of North Carolina. The Surgeon General of the U.S. sent members of the Public Health Service to North Carolina for training under Dr. Hugnes.

Mrs. Jennie D. Taylor, a former associate of Dr. Hughes and the chairman of the committee responsible for acquiring the portrait of Dr. Hughes by William C. Fields of Fayetteville, remembers working with Dr. Hughes in the field of school health.

"He knew how to reach the people. He was doing something nobody else was doing.' Mrs. Taylor recalls a day in the mid - 1940's when Dr. Hughes pointed to a group of school children in an eastern North Carolina town. "He said 'Jennie, do you see those children? They look a whole lot better now than when I first started." Many of the techniques developed by Dr. Hughes in improving the health of North Carolina school children have been adapted by the World Health Organization to their The portrait will hang at North Carolina Central because of Dr. Hughes' close association with the university. It was he who recommended to'Dr. James E. Shepard that the university establish a department of health eduzation and public health. Dr. Hughes was also insturmental in improving health services at black colleges and universities in the state. Dr. Hughes is survived by his wife, Mrs. Hattie Hughes of Greensboro. Two sons, Walter J. Hughes Jr. and Durward Hughes, are medical doctors. Mrs. Hughes will attend the ceremonies on December 10 and Dr. Hughes' granddaughter Carol will unveil the portrait. Members of the committee
