NCCU Law Group Proposes New Landlord-Tenant Measures

A group of North Carolina Central University Law School law students and law professors has prepared amendments to the proposed Uniform Residential Landlord and Tenant Act and submitted the proposal at a meeting of North Carolina realtors, legislators and tenants' representatives on December 16. The proposal was submitted at a Landlord-Tenant Workshop held at Shaw University. Approximately 300 persons attended the workshop. Keynote speaker for the meeting was Jesse Gray, President of the National Tenants' Organization, who advocated adoption of the proposal. Among the concepts submitted in the proposal by the NCCU group were provisions that would permit tenants to vacate premises found to be uninhabitable or allow them to use rent money for repair. The way the present law is written, tenants who vacate premises without the landlord's permission may still be liable for rent. Other provisions would require landlords to supply rea-

Shirley Chisholm Among Ten Most Admired Women For '72

Representative Shirley Chisholm of New York was today named among the top ten winners in the Good Housekeeping annual poll of the world's 10 most admired women.

SHIRLEY CHISHOLM
Mrs. Coretta King was ranked among the runners-up in the survey which appears in the January issue of the magazine. Citing Rep. Chisholm for her commitment to women's rights and civil rights, one respondent commented: "I came to admire Mrs. Chisholm even more after hearing her campaign for the Presidency among the male candidates. I like the way she is willing to stick her neck out to bring about improvements in our social structure." The awareness of Rep. Chisholm's role in Congress and her candidacy for President has put her in the foreground as a woman's leader in the political field. She made a strong showing in last year's poll, but did not make the top ten. This year, in her tie for ninth place Rep. Chisholm has, indeed, joined the top rank of the most admired.

The winners in the magazine poll were: (1) Patricia Nixon; (2) POW wives - including Mrs. Norris Charles, whose POW husband Lt. Charles was recently released from North Vietnam after a nine month imprisonment; (3) Rose Kennedy; (4) Premier Golda Meir; (5) Writer Pearl Buck; (6) Mamie Eisenhower; (7) Actress Patricia

Honest Investigation is Asked In Panther House Explosion

MEMPHIS, TENN. — People in the black community here, along with white supporters, are demanding an "honest investigation" of an explosion that demolished a house occupied by members of the Tennessee Black Panther Party. The explosion occurred in mid-November. A Black Panther member, Brenda Henry, and two infants were in the house, and observers said it seemed a miracle that they escaped injury. A fire following the explosion destroyed clothing and furniture and other Panther property.

Memphis Fire Department inspectors said they believed the explosion was caused by a faulty gas furnace. However, inspectors from the Memphis Light, Gas and Water Co., said the furnace could not have been the cause. Photographs show the furnace intact.

However, nothing has been done by officials, and no word of the incident was reported in the local news media, except by two black-orientated radio stations. The explosion came just a few weeks after a police raid on an intercommunal survival center set up by the Panthers. The center had been the scene of a community Survival Con-

'1776' Contest Open to Young Journalists

Thousands of classrooms throughout the United States will stop the presses to bring out a "1776" extra edition of their local newspapers as part of a unique "Front Page" contest sponsored by Columbia Pictures in conjunction with the national release of the film, "1776." The contest, in which students will create a front page of their local newspaper as it might have appeared on July 5, 1776, reporting the actions of the Continental Congress in declaring independence from Great Britain, has, as of December 12, received entry requests from schools in 27 states.

Grand prize in the contest will be a special preview performance of the Jack L. Warner Production for Columbia Pictures at a local theatre. The prize will be awarded in three categories: Primary School, Intermediate School and High School.

In an unusual move, student journalists will not be required to recreate an old-time version of their local paper; rather, the rules make allowances for modern journalistic techniques. In making their newspaper dummy, students are being advised

WILEY QUILTS NWRO TO FORM NEW POOR GROUP

The head of the National Welfare Rights Organization (NWRO), Dr. George Wiley, announced here today that he is leaving the 7 year old group to start a new "broader based" organization of poor people.

Wiley, who has been Executive Director of the group since it was founded, said that he was leaving to "forge a new movement for economic justice which will include welfare recipients, the working poor, the poor, the aged and sympathetic members of the middle class."

"For several years," said Wiley, "I have felt the need to broaden the welfare rights movement. Standing alone as they do now, welfare recipients are isolated and can be only marginally effective. Although two-thirds of the people in this country would directly benefit from the NWRO adequate income plan, only a small minority has supported this plan. We must gain their support and get them involved if we are to be successful."

According to Wiley, 41, his new Movement for Economic Justice would attempt to bring together divergent segments of society which until now have been hostile toward welfare recipients. By using issues such as tax reform and national health insurance, Wiley said that he "hopes to link up $5,000 to $15,000 income range people with poor people on a common economic agenda."

In the seven years that Wiley has headed NWRO, the group has grown to over 800 locals, located in every state and U.S. possession, with a membership in excess of 200,000 made up mostly of welfare mothers on Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC).

Only 3-million of the estimated 50-million poor people in this country are welfare mothers. And there are another 70-million in the $5,000 to $15,000 income range. All these people, not just welfare mothers, "Wiley said, "have a stake in tax reform, health care and adequate income. We must have with those issues that link people not divide them and soon they will see other things that they have in common with each other."

NWRO has been credited with the defeat, during the closing days of the 93rd Congress of President Nixon's welfare plan. In the spring of this year, NWRO was the major sponsor of the Children's March for Survival. The march brought nearly 50,000 people to the nation's capitol to protest President Nixon's welfare plan and his cuts in social services to children.

During the Democratic Convention this past summer, NW

PHYSICISTS HONORED

Three Pioneer Black Physicists Cited By Colleagues At Fisk

NASHVILLE — Three pioneer black physicists were honored by 40 of their colleagues at the first National Physics Fellows Award Banquet sponsored by the Community of Black Physicists on Saturday at Fisk University.

Drs. Halson V. Eagleson of Howard University, Washington, D.C., Donald A. Edwards of North Carolina A. & T. University, Greensboro, and John M. Hunter of Virginia State College, Petersburg, received the awards.

In welcoming the newly formed Community of Black Physicists to the campus, Fisk President and Professor of Physics Dr. James R. Lawson said, "It is heartwarming to see so many respond to the call. I have a real belief," he continued, "that it will be possible for this group to have a positive influence on the actual existence of black colleges today."

Prior to the presentation of the citations, Dr. Warren E. Henry of Howard University pointed out that only 60 of the nation's 17,000 physicists are black. "The best way to honor these three men who have contributed a positive physics perspective to more than 90 per cent of those 60," Henry declared, "is to continue their dedication and encouragement"
