Malcolm X Liberation U. Closes; Overemphasis on Africa Blamed

Malcolm X Liberation University must be seen not in isolation, but as part of the great struggle which reached new heights in the '60's—the struggle for the freedom of Black people. MXLU was born of the civil rights struggle. That was the struggle against racism on the job and in the school, born of the realization by Black people in North Carolina and, indeed, around the country that the education system does not serve the needs of the masses of Black people. It was with this realization that we started in 1969 to build an independent Black educational institution.

Although the immediate catalyst for the formation of MXLU was the struggle of Black students and non-academic employees at Duke University, our goals were much broader, for we intended to accomplish two ambitious things:

—first, to build a school where the real history of our people could be taught; where serious people could learn the nature of this society and the nature of the world, free from the lies and distortions perpetuated in most institutions in the interest of

Number Of Black Elected Officials More Than Doubled In Four Years

WASHINGTON — The number of black elected officials in the United States has more than doubled in the last four years, according to the latest "National Roster of Black Elected Officials", recently published by the Joint Center for Political Studies.

As of April of this year, 2,621 black persons held 2,627 elective office at every level, from local school boards to the United States Congress, including six who hold more than one office.

In 1969, when the first annual roster was compiled, there were 1,185 black office-holders. Today there are almost that many in the South alone. The latest figure represents an increase of 121 per cent in four years.

Compared to one year ago, there has been a gain of 15 per cent, from a 1972 figure of 2,264.

Despite the significant numerical advance, however blacks still hold only one-half of one per cent of the more than 500,000 elective offices in the country.

The Joint Center for Political Studies, which compiled the roster of black office-holders, is a private,

White Couple Wins Right to Black Children

ELLENVILLE, N. Y. — (NBNS)—A white couple has been allowed to keep two black children, who they want to adopt, despite efforts of the local welfare agency.

The children have been with the John Morrrows for 18 months now. Last year the children's mother died and the parents asked to adopt the two children. The identity of the father is unknown.

Last week, a social worker took the youngsters out of class and advised them they would be sent to another home the following day.

The Morrrows then planned a demonstration to protest the seizure of the kids. And the NAACP agreed to help along with several members of the county legislature. The couple have no children of their own.

But the county social service commissioner, Bernhard Kramer, reversed his social worker's decision when he learned of it.

"I looked into it, and I decided the children are to remain in the Morrow home." (See COUPLE page 2A)
