CLUBS & HAPPENINGS AROUND DURHAM

CENTRAL ORPHANAGE IS SCENE OF VARIETY OF ACTIVITIES

The Central Orphanage at Oxford on May 8 was the scene of a variety of activities by the Durham Alumni Chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity. William D. Lee, a 20-year retired military man, was inducted into the organization. While in military service, Lee studied at Albany State College in Georgia and finally completed requirements for the Bachelor's degree at the Greater University of Maryland. Following his discharge from the military, he was in civil service for 8 years with post transportation. Since moving back to Durham, his hometown, he has completed a real estate brokers course which was conducted at the Y.W.C.A. on Chapel Hill Street. He is married to the former Miss Thelma D. Jones of Durham.

Following the induction ceremony, the chapter held a business session. Officers elected for 1974-75 were J. J. (Babe) Henderson, president; Murphy Jenkins, vice president; Robert L. McAdams, keeper of records; Raymond McAllister, keeper of exchequer; William T. Tolliver, strategist; H. V. Bryant, lieutenant strategist; John L. Stewart, reporter; and James T. Hawkins, historian.

The banquet was followed by a fellowship period. At the banquet, the invocation was given by Randal Rogers. Bobby Lawrence recognized the special guests as Ronnie Dowdy from Jordan High School; Elvis Tabor, Southern; Gregory Reddish, Northern; Bernard Stone, Chapel Hill; and Michael Howerton, Henderson High School.

Lindsay G. Barnes, the main banquet speaker, was introduced by F. Howard Alston. In his discourse, Barnes admonished the fraternity to become actively socially with the current problems of society. His subject was "Direction of Fraternities on College Campuses Today."

Achievement awards in the form of plaques were bestowed upon John L. Stewart, Carter C. Smith, and Sanford E. Williams by the chapter.

On this occasion, the chapter makes a donation of $200 to the Central Orphanage.

The committee on founder's Day, recognition banquet and achievement consisted of Bobby Lawrence, chairman; Willie F. Boyd, co-chairman; F. Howard Alston, Sanford Williams, Henry A. Atwater, Lee W. Smith and C. O. Pearson.

No Flies on Berlin's Flea Market

A hugely popular flea market, on a subway platform no less, is West Berlin's newest tourist attraction.

Ever wonder how a flea market gets born from scratch (no pun intended)? Well, first you obtain a permit to clean up and re-decorate the no-longer-used elevated station at Nollendorplatz. Then you position eighteen bright-yellow subway cars between the glass-enclosed platforms. Next, you subdivide and transform these carriages into really attractive booths and boutiques. Finally, you sub-lease the places to concessionaires who fill the subway cars and portions of the platforms with the probably obsolete but unfailingly popular mementos and artifacts of days gone by, ranging all the way from near-junk to authentic antiques.

Having converted the disused station and cars to contemporary use, you also add a poster shop, an art gallery, a mini moviehouse featuring nostalgic oldies; and top it all off with yet another canary-bued carriage decorated in the style of a Berlin pub at the turn of the century, and business is fine, thank you.

Since the flea market is located some thirty feet above street level where the erstwhile trains used to emerge from their subterranean haunts, you can't possibly miss it, and since the Nollendorplatz area borders Berlin's downtown shopping district it is, as they say also of Berlin itself, well worth a visit.
