Warren Made Last Public Address At Morehouse College

Morehouse College was close to the heart of former Chief Justice Earl Warren, and during the last years of his life he gave a great deal of time to the $20 million national fund-raising campaign conducted by that Atlanta school.

Despite a serious heart condition, Mr. Warren agreed to serve as National Chairman of the College's Second-Century Development aign. He undertook this assignment at the request of Senator Hubert Jumphrey, who received an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Morehouse College in 1968 and has been very supportive of the College since that time.

As Honorary National Chairman of the drive, Mr. Warren, invited other prominent individuals to serve on the National Council of Sponsors and solicited contributions from corporations and foundations in behalf of the College. Mr. Warren's efforts were successful, and very few individuals and agencies refused to assist in the campaign along the lines requested by him.

Despite a warning from his physician, Mr. Warren agreed to serve on May 21 as speaker for the Morehouse Commencement Exercises, which turned out to be his last public address. During this program he received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Morehouse College, and in the citation President Hugh M Gloster paid him the following tribute:

As Chief Justice, you defended the constitutional rights and freedoms of individual American citizens, regardless of color, creed, or national origin. Perhaps the most significant and far-reaching action of your evenful career came exactly twenty years and four days ago, when you wrote the historic decision holding that racial segregation in public schools is unconstitutional. In this connection you said, In the field of education the doctrines of separate but equal has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal. This decision not only put the stamp of unconstitutionality on dual public school systems in 21 states and the District of Columbia but also dealt a death blow to segregation in other areas of American life.

In commenting on the passing of Mr. Warren, Dr. Gloster stated, "In the death of Earl Warren, Morehouse College, has lost one of her strongest supporters, and the United States has lost an outstanding champion of liberty, justice, and equlity. When the history of the thrid quarter of the twentieth Century is written, Earl Warren will take his rightful place as perhaps the outstanding Chief Justice of the United States.

The U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics plans to issue two consumer price indexes starting in 1977, one for urban wage earners and clerical workers and a broader index for all urban households.
