Alleged Rape Report Called A Hoax By NCCU Officials

Million Of Jobless To Receive Pay

President Ford has signed emergency legislation authorizing public service jobs and extended unemployment compensation for millions of jobless workers and appropriating $4 billion to pay for them.

The new legislation creates four emergency programs designed to assist jobless workers most in need of help. They are:

An emergency unemployment-compensation type program of up to $2.5 billion for more than 3 million persons not eligible for regular unemployment compensation. Congress appropriated $2 billion to assist about 2.4 million workers. There are approximately 12 million workers in this category, most of them in state and local government jobs.

Additional unemployment insurance compensation for which $750 million was appropriated to assist approximately 1.2 million unemployed workers covered by unemployment insurance who have exhausted their benefits.

The freshman student said she had received threatening notes two weeks before the assault and other women were reported to have received similar note.

After much investigation the director of public relations at NCCU, said that it was a most regrettable incident.

Handwriting analysts revealed that the student was writing the notes to herself. It was also reported that it was fortunate that no one was accused and that no description was given as the incident was thoroughly investigated.
