DO SOMETHING ABOUT ENERGY CONSERVATION

Energy conservation is one of the obvious focal points of the present and future and is also a priority of the Extension Service, the education arm of the United States Department of Agriculture. According to recent information, studies have shown that commonplace habits in preparing food can be costly, not only in terms of wasted money but wasted energy. Food preparation usually involves the use of several heat producing appliances and appliances which produce heat require more energy generally, than motor driver or motion appliances. The wise use of these appliances can save a great deal of energy.

Energy saving starts with the way you use the range. To conserve energy, start most foods at a higher temperature, then reduce the heat to maintain the desired cooking temperature.

Did you know that every time you open the door to the oven the temperature drops from 25-50 degrees? That's why you have the "peek a boo" window on modern ranges so you don't have to waste that energy!

You can learn to be a good "oven manager" by using the oven for a whole meal, not just one potato. Using your oven to capacity is a good habit to form. If you're only preparing one time, effort, as well as fuel energy.

The kind of utensils you use can make a difference in energy conservation. When cooking use only utensils that fit the range burners or surface units. Remember, pans with flat bottoms will absorb more heat. Be sure to use tight fitting lids and place the utensil on the range before turning on the heat. To conserve oven heat, use more glass or glass ceramic baking dishes (when possible), because they transfer heat more efficiently than metal. If you use glass or ceramic dishes, you can lower oven heat by 25 degrees (if you're using a recipe that calls for 375 degrees, you can usually use 350 degree.) If you have an electric range, cut your time by five minutes, turn off and let the reserved oven heat continue to bake your food.

Using casseroles and dishes that require just one range top burner are useful fuel saving shortcuts. You might want to try one of the following fuel saving casseroles that can be prepared on the top of your stove.

TOP-OF-STOVE CASSEROLE

- 1 small onion
- 1 pound ground beef
- 2 cups canned tomatoes
- 1/2 cup uncooked rice
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 2 1/2 cups cooked split peas
- Salt and pepper, as you like

Chop onion. Put ground beef and onion in pan. Cook until meat is browned. Drain off fat. Add tomatoes, rice, water, and sugar. Cover and boil gently about 25 minutes until rice is tender. Add split peas, salt and pepper. Heat slowly until hot.

LUNCHEON MEAT SPANISH RICE

- 1/2 cup uncooked rice
- 1 tablespoon fat or oil
- 1 small onion
- 1/2 green pepper
- 1 stalk celery
- 2 1/2 cups canned tomatoes
- 2 1/2 cups cut-up canned luncheon meat

Cook rice in fat or oil until lightly browned. Chop onion, green pepper, and celery. Add to rice. Stir in tomatoes. Heat to boiling. Lower heat. Cover and cook about 25 minutes until rice is tender. Add meat to rice and heat until meat is hot.
