Ash's Earnings $315,000 For '75

Arthur Ashe, who has already earned $315,000 this year, more from tournament tennis than any other player in one season, recently showed his increasing involvement with South Africa and its underprivileged blacks. He helped open a $570,000 tennis court complex in Soweto, the sprawling African area outside Johannesburg. The money is being raised mainly through pledges from businessmen, but some of Ashe's own money is reported going into the project.

Hillside High Students Form Gymnastics Team

A group of athletically inclined students at Hillside High School have formed a gymnastics team for their own pleasure and exercise.

Under the guidance of Mrs. Ruth Pool, the students practice "catch as catch can," whenever and wherever space is available for them with tumbling mats and a trampoline.

The group put on a show at Northgate Shopping Center Friday, November 28 and again Saturday, November 29. On Wednesday, December 3, the group of enthusiastic youngsters were in the mall at South Square, performing for shoppers.

The format, according to Mrs. Pool, is more creative than formal, with each of the students in her group doing his or her "own thing." Each of the students also works on a personal specialty in acrobatics, tumbling and/or trampolines.

The remainder of the group's schedule calls for shows at schools in the Durham City Schools System, but the willing group is looking for other places to practice and perform.

More than 55 per cent of all money spent by the Veterans Administration on procurement in fiscal year 1975 went to small business firms.
