The banquet, general session and luncheon meetings will be open to the news media; except for those on coalition-building workshops will not.

Participants in these meetings and discussions will include: Coleman Young, mayor, Detroit, Michigan; Congressman Augustus F. Hawkins (D-Calif.) and Charles B. Rangel (D-N.Y.), chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus; William T. Coleman, Secretary of Transportation; (Maynard Jackson, mayor, Atlanta, Georgia; Ethel Allen, councilwoman, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Edward McIntyre, chairman, Richmond County, Georgia Board of Commissioners; Carl B. Speaking for the sponsors of the Institute, Eddie N. Williams, president of the Joint Center for Political Studies, said:

"We have been encouraged by the response so far that this important national non-partisan leadership development meeting will be well attended by both black elected officials and invited observers from an assortment of civil rights and community service-oriented organizations. The meeting is an implicit recognition of the role and significance of political participation in bringing about a change for the better in the lives of black Americans and others who suffer disproportionately from economic deprivation.

"We believe that the system can change - that it can be made more just, more equal. We want to improve the capability and effectiveness of those officials who have been elected to bring about change and to take steps to increase their ranks and the ranks of others who support our goal of broad, effective political participation by black Americans at all levels of government."
