 tion why should he pay for it? But from our domestic experience alone, we know that affirmative action for minorities and women tends to expand opportunities for all (c.f. the case of "open admissions" at the City University of New York). Moreover, the food processor who hasn't poisoned a soul, still has to adhere to FDA regulations to prevent botulism. Giving workers the right to strike, reasoning by analogy, is "reverse discrimination" against employers. Sober consideration impels us to acknowledge that singling out affirmative action guidelines for special abuse smacks of the very racism

...se little enforced rules are designed to attack.
 Once again, we must consider if our seeing the "race problem" and/or affirmative action as a purely "American" concern is appropriate. Furthermore, in a world where precious resources—oil, gold, columbium, copper, bauxite, etc.—are located predominantly in "colored" countries, can this country afford to have its "colored" citizens relegated to a second-class status as "hewers of wood and drawers of water?" The coming of diplomats from newly independent Africa spurred the desegregation of Washington, D.C., and the nation at large, as an attempt was made to avoid offending "hearts and minds" in the Cold War battle. De jure segregation was outlawed in the 1960's as the ostrich's head came partly out of the sand. We must now collectively see that if we are to avoid a domestic quagmire of the 1980's, we must do away with the provincialism that again makes us susceptible to the leader who claims he has the "facts" about something he calls "reverse discrimination."

In 1966-7 Sir Francis Chichester circumnavigated the world in his yacht Gipsy Moth, sailing 29,000 miles in 226 days.
