SMALL BUSINESS CONFERENCE SET JAN. 13

Hunt Names Galloway As District Court Judge

Judicial Seat Created By '79 Gen. Assembly

Gov. Jim Hunt Monday, December 31, appointed Durham lawyer Karen Galloway as District Court Judge for the 14th Judicial District (Durham County). The judicial seat was created by the 1979 General Assembly.

Hunt praised the 30-year-old Wake County native as "a person who will especially be dedicated to making the courts work more efficiently, especially in the area of juvenile justice. She shares my deep concern about crime, and I am convinced she will be a strong judge who will earn the respect of those who practice in her court."

Retiring Superior Court Judge Hamilton H. Hobgood, who presided over the Joan Little trial, was highly complimentary of Karen Galloway's performance as one of the defense attorneys in that case. In a letter to Gov. Hunt, Judge Hobgood said, "She did an excellent job in that capacity and conducted herself in a highly professional manner at all times. Since then, Karen has been an attorney in my courts on numerous occasions and she has handled those cases in a highly professional manner."

The Governor said he made his choice for the 14th District judgeship from a field of "six outstanding candidates, all of whom I interviewed personally."

Galloway was named Lawyer of the Year in 1976 by the National Conference of Black Lawyers.

She has been a lecturer at the National College for Criminal Defense Lawyers at Bates College of Law in Houston, Texas.

She received an AB degree in psychology from East Carolina University in 1971 and is a 1974 graduate of Duke University Law School. Her father was a postal employee in Raleigh for 20 years prior to his death. Her mother teaches at Fred T. Olds Elementary School in Raleigh.

Revs. Vivian and Walker

To Coordinate February 2 March

Rev. C. T. Vivian and Rev. Lucius Walker, Jr., were elected last weekend to co-direct the planning staff for the February 2 peaceful, non-violent mobilization. The gathering of civil rights, labor, political, religious, legal and educational groups in Greensboro on February 2 is projected as the beginning of a new civil rights thrust. Both Walker and Vivian say the new thrust is to "achieve the unfinished work of the civil rights and human rights struggles of the 1950's and 1960's."

Rev. Walker is executive director of the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO), a national church agency whose mission is to support community organizing for human justice.

Rev. Vivian was national director of chapters for the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and more recently was acting executive director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC).

The march is planned to commemorate the historic February 1966 Woolworth lunch counter sit-ins that triggered a wave of anti-racist struggles across the South; to begin a new human rights offensive, and to focus outrage toward recent terrorist atrocities that are referred to by many as manifestations of a Bakke mentality through the nation, said Walker.

Rev. Vivian said the February 2 mobilization "will provide opportunity for the nation to express outrage at the November 3 Nazi-Klan murder of five anti-Klan demonstrators in Greensboro and the wide-spread rise of Klan-type terror across the country."

The march call was first initiated December 15 at a historic meeting in Atlanta which was convened by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and IFCO.

The weekend meeting of the Steering Committee, elected by the Atlanta conference, was attended by more than 150 representatives from member groups.

The violent rise of rightist forces, including as many as thirty Klan and Nazi groups nationally plus a Klan "mentality" which threatens to destroy even the minimal electoral, employment, housing and other gains won in the sixties, cemented these activists in the coalition.

Speaking of the gravity of Klan uprisings, Rev. Walker commented, "The recent Ku Klux Klan violence in Greensboro, Decatur, and Atlanta. Klan recruitment efforts in the Navy, and the cross burnings in Connecticut all serve as proof of the

Carter to Address 2000

WASHINGTON, DC — President Carter is scheduled to address 2,000 participants to the White House Conference on Small Business on Sunday evening, January 13, at the Washington Hilton Hotel.

The conference, the largest forum of its kind, will be held at two hotels, the Washington Hilton and the Sheraton Washington, January 13-17.

Featured speakers include Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, Presidential Advisor Alfred Kahn, Acting Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges, Jr. and Chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Small Business, Gaylord Nelson.

Capital formation, government regulations and paperwork and economic and social questions affecting small business will be considered by delegates.

Michael K. Casey, Conference Director, says the conference comes at a time when many observers of social and economic trends believe that small business and the opportunity for Americans to go into business for themselves are essential to keep America working.

A. Vernon Weaver, Administrator of the U. S. Small Business Administration says that small business accounts for 43 percent of the gross national product (GNP). Small business directly or indirectly provides the livelihood of over 100 million Americans, and creates more jobs than any other part of the economy. Between 1969

By dialing the "Budget Hotline" at 683-4111 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. during the week of January 14-18, citizens will be able to make their suggestions about city spending. Suggestions received over the "Hotline" or on a mail-in form will be forwarded to the City Council.

Persons desiring more information about the hearing or about the "Hotline" may contact Ellen Goldman in the Budget Office on the second floor of City Hall or telephone 683-4111.

Rusk Says Past U.S. Acts Cause Anti-Americanism

By Lawrence A. Still (Capital News Service) WASHINGTON, D.C. — Past racial practices in the United States contribute to the cause of anti-American demonstrations occurring in parts of the world, former U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk quietly told a meeting of the National Commission for the support of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) recently.

Rusk's remarks preceded a heated discussion among minority and majority members of the interracial commission meeting to recommend a policy "Toward An American Agenda for a New World Order in Communications." Only twelve of the 100 members of the U.S. commission are black citizens, according to UNESCO records.

Speaking at the sessions at the University of Georgia in Athens last week, Rusk reminded commissioners of the segregated and discriminatory treatment of Africans and other "Third World" students and diplomats who were studying or serving in the United States a few years ago. He is now visiting professor of international law at the university.

Less than ten or fifteen years ago, an African diplomat could not get a decent meal or decent lodging in some parts of the country, Rusk recalled during the luncheon meeting. "An African ambassador once sat in my office and asked me 'where can I get a haircut,

NAACP Honors Jewish Attorney For Thirty Years In Civil Rights

Jack Greenberg, director-counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, was honored by the NAACP recently for his thirty years of service to the black organization.

Greenberg, who became director-counsel of the Fund in 1961 after working there as a full-time lawyer since 1949, said that he had seen "no substantial" opposition to him, a white man and a Jew, as head of the Black legal defense organization.

As the legal arm of the NAACP, the Fund was involved in precedent-making cases aimed at ending discrimination in several areas. The best known case that Greenberg worked on; under the supervision of Thurgood Marshall — now an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court — was Brown vs. The Board Of Education in 1954, which resulted in the historic Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

Now an independent organization, the Fund has defended numerous civil rights demonstrators, including the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and taken hundreds of cases to strengthen the enforcement of civil rights laws and assure equal opportunity in jobs, housing and education.

PKCO Fundraiser To Support Local Tutorial Program

CHAPEL HILL — The Pine-Knolls Community Organization of Chapel Hill, a non-profit organization composed of neighborhood residents, is in its fourth year of a district-wide, community run, one to one tutorial program. Last year's program went better than any of the previous efforts. There have been about fifty children from elementary to high school levels receiving assistance in various subjects.

The tutorial program started as a response to need. That being a need for a community based educational support to aid low income students who were not performing well academically. The enrollees in the program are electing to study in the afternoons and evenings to improve their skills.

The organization has been financially supporting the program as well as housing it in its community center. Residents have conducted yard, bake, and candy sales to raise the monies. Presently funds needed for the program and the upkeep of the Center are limited.

To raise money so that the tutorial program can continue to provide its much needed service, a fundraiser is under way. Prizes that will be given away to lucky winners include a television set, groceries, a gift certificate, restaurant dinners, and candy. Tickets are being sold for a $1 donation by members of the organization. Drawing for the prizes will be at 2 p.m. Pines Center, 107 Johnson St., Chapel Hill, Saturday, February 9. For more information of tickets, call 942-6571 or 942-7701.
