Kraft, Inc.'s Southeast Regional vice president, Jerry Nickens, left, presents a $1,000 contribution to Dr. Eloise Carter, chairman of the Foodservice in Management Program at Tuskegee Institute. Looking on is Ken Koefor, vice president of Sales and Operations for Kraft's Foodservice Division. According to Nickens, who is also a member of the Tuskegee Foodservice Corporate Advisory Group, "This program represents a valuable recruitment resource for Kraft sales representatives who call on restaurants, hospitals, schools and other food service establishments."

"KKK Is Extreme Expression Of Anti-Black"

"systematically subverted effective community opposition to Klan terror." The report which lay the basis for Bond's charges is entitled "Mark of the Beast" and is contained in the summer issue of the Institute for Southern Studies' quarterly journal, Southern Exposure. It juxtaposes Klan speeches and prayers with firsthand accounts of Klan violence from the 1870s to the 1970s, a case study of anti-union Klan violence in the 1930s and profiles of how the Klan operates today.

In one major article, investigative reporter Pat Bryant analyzes the "divisive" role of the Justice Department's Community Relations Service (CRS), including its "COINTELPRO-style operations" which thwart community opposition to the Klan.

According to Bryant, "It is becoming increasingly clear that the information CRS gathers does not support the legal rights and legitimate struggles of human-rights activists. On the contrary, the agency has become a primary force in squelching the minority rights it was created to protect in 1964."

In his article, Bryant reviews recent CRS activities in Greensboro and Raleigh, and in Byhalia, Mississippi, and Louisville, Kentucky. Each case, he says, illustrates how the CRS personnel "deal routinely in half-truth, rumor mongering, red-baiting and innuendo" to "undermine the unity and effectiveness of people trying to combat the racist abuse of our society."

Bryant said in an interview with The Carolina Times that many cases of CRS undermining local human rights struggles were not included. "The involvement of CRS Agent Robert Ensley when the Durham Police Brutality Coalition was side tracked from demands for a citizen review board of police activities," said Bryant, was one case not included in the report.

"Ensley came in and convinced some of the more moderate leadership to settle on the proposed writing of police operating procedures, when that was not the issue at all," Bryant said. "The result is that police now operate in the same way they once did, with some exceptions. That is what we call derailing a peoples' struggle," Bryant continued.

After the Coalition split, the City continued to implement an internal review in which the police now investigate complaints against police.

Other articles in the fifteen-part report analyze the Klan's resurgence: "It keeps rising again," writes Mrs. Anne Braden, co-chair of the Southern Organizing Committee for Economic Justice, "because we have not yet defeated the ideology that gives rise to it. That ideology is racism which has poisoned the minds of white people in this country." A few pages later, C.P. Ellis, former Klan president in Durham, tells interviewer Studs Terkel what led him to join the Klan: "Try to come out of that (financial) hole, I just couldn't do it. I really began to get bitter. I didn't know who to blame. I tried to find somebody. Hating America is hard to do because you can't see it to hate it. The natural person for me to hate would be black people, because my father before me was a member of the Klan. As far as he was concerned it was the only organization in the world for white people. So, I began to admire the Klan."

Numerous case studies contained in the report document the use of strategies successfully employed over the last 100 years. More recent examples profiled include building broad-based coalitions and adopting direct action tactics in cities like Dallas, New Orleans, Decatur, Alabama, and Tupelo Mississippi.

"In building coalitions for longterm work against the Klan," Bond said, "we must not take an approach which isolates us from our allies, and we must be cautious of those who purport to be our friends — like the CRS — who have the effect of splintering us against each other."

Bond made his remarks in an Atlanta press conference, where he presented the report to Ms. Mary Joyce Carlson and Fred Taylor, representing the National Anti-Klan Network. The Network had asked the Institute to conduct research on the Klan and the government's role in its reemergence, said Bond.

Bob Hall, director of the Institute, emphasized the need to "educate white Americans who, frustrated and confused by the inequities and problems of this society, are potential recruits of the Klan or the Klan mentality."

Hall pointed to another report in the same issue of Southern Exposure which exposes the "right wing network of lawyers, consultants and employer associations who use racism and other divisive tactics to keep whites and blacks from joining together in forming unions."

The report on "Union Busters," which Hall co-authored, examines several recent labor organizing campaigns in the South and provides a blow-by-blow description of the often illegal actions and advice of "a new breed of anti-union professionals" who, Hall says, "use the language of psychological counseling and the weakness in the National Labor Relations Act to keep workers frightened, divided and unorganized."

Quoting one of the anti-union professional's confidential advice to personnel managers not to hire any more blacks than legally necessary because they "tend to be more prone to unionization," Hall said nothing shows the class effect of the racism and the Klan-style mentality better than the corporation's use of red-baiting and anti-black rhetoric.

"The difference between the Klan and the union busters is that of money," said Hall. "Union busters represent a richer, more powerful version of the Klan. The

Miss Atkins Attends MITE

MISS ATKINS

Miss Shelia R. Atkins, a sophomore at Northern High School, Durham, attended the Minority Introduction to Engineering (MITE) program at North Carolina State University (Raleigh) recently.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sammie C. Atkins of Route 8, Box 403-B, Infinity Road. Miss Atkins was selected to attend the program aimed at exploring career opportunities in engineering on the basis of her interest in science and mathematics.

The MITE program is a national effort to increase the number of minorities in the engineering profession. Miss Atkins explored the importance of physics and mathematics to engineering study and attended sample classes and laboratory sessions.

Coordinating the MITE program at the NCSU School of Engineering is Byard Houck, director of the engineering school's special projects, and John F. Freeman.

corporations that support them can afford to maintain a number of right-wing organizations, like the national Right to Work Committee and the National Association of Manufacturers, to spread hate propaganda in a more polished form than the typical Klan spokesmen. But the effect is the same: the economic conditions of all working Southerners are kept repressed," said Hall

Abner Mason, Jr. Graduates From Academy

Abner Mason, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Abner S. Mason, Sr., of 4909 Foxglove Street, graduated from Governor Dummer Academy in Byfield, Massachusetts on Friday, June 6. The Academy, founded in 1763, is the oldest boarding school in the United States.

At the Academy, Mason was a member of the Discipline Committee, the Black Student Union and the Academy Players — a theatrical group in whose production he starred as Pippin in the musical comedy "Pippin". He was also captain of the track team, co-editor of the Academy's yearbook, The Milstone, and a member of the chorus.

A National Merit-National Achievement Program semi-finalist, Mason was also a member of the Cum Laude Society, the Governor Dummer Academy Honor Society, the International Thespian Society, the Society for Distinguished American High School Students. He was also a selectee for the 1980 edition of Who's Who Among American High School Students.

The Baccalaureate Address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Grady D. Davis, pastor of Union Baptist Church, Durham, were Mason and his family are members. Dr. Davis was the first black to give a baccalaureate address in the Academy's 217 year history. Using Charles Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities" as a theme, Dr. Davis spoke on the paradoxes that characterize today's world.

At the Awards Ceremonies on Thursday, June 5, Mason was the recipient of the "Academy Prize," one of the Academy's two highest awards.

Mason will continue his education at Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, in the fields of bi-engineering and re-

London was once the capital city of three-quarters of the world.

Twenty-One National Guards Get Gold Bars

FORT BRAGG — Twenty-one new North Carolina Army National Guard Second Lieutenants received their gold bars Saturday, June 21, when they were commissioned during graduation ceremonies at the North Carolina Military Academy, Fort Bragg. Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety, Burley Mitchell, was the keynote speaker for this occasion. He challenged the new National Guard Officers to continue the State's great traditions as he congratulated them for this accomplishment.

The new Lieutenants are the 22nd Officer Candidate School (OCS) class to graduate from the North Carolina Military Academy (NCMA). They will be assigned to various Army National Guard units throughout the state. The 23rd OCS class began training on June 7. Graduates of that class will be commissioned next June.

National Guard Colonel David V. McMillan of Fayetteville, is the Commandant of the school. Class 22 is the first class to complete OCS at the NCMA under McMillan's command.

Five of the graduates received special recognition for their achievements.

The distinguished graduate was James R. Gorham of Greenville. Gorham also received the leadership award.

Honor graduates were Terry D. Todd of Albemarle, Frank T. Hobgood, Jr. of Raleigh, and Joseph M. Hewett, III of Shallotte.

The academic award went to Christopher Jones of Greensboro.
