Success Reported In Durham Schools Testing

By Trelle L. Jeffers

Durham City Schools Superintendent, Dr. Cleveland Hammonds presented a report of the recent test score results at the regular meeting of the school board on Monday night, July 14. While expressing his pleasure about pupil performance, Dr. Hammonds expressed concern that the state's Testing Commission has preceded city officials in releasing this information to the media.

The following is a breakdown of the test results:

•The first grades scored 1.9 in reading and 2.9 in math. The first grade national norm for reading is 1.7.

•The second grades scored 2.9 in reading and 3.5 in math.

•The third grades averaged 3.7 in math, reading, spelling and language arts.

•The sixth grades scored 6.1 in the same four categories, five months below the national average.

•The ninth grades averaged 7.9 in four categories, approximately one whole grade level below the national average, but higher than last year's performance.

Dr. Hammonds said that test items are now being studied to ascertain the exact categories where additional attention should be focused, and when this has been done, special instruction and instructional materials will be centered on these categories.

Dr. Hammonds also said that while Educational Testing Service (ETS) says that test scores reflect the pupils' socio-economic income level, the Durham City School district has succeeded in elevating pupils above the national norms. (A large number of the city school pupils are from low socio-economic levels).

There will be no study of psychological factors involved in determining why ninth graders fall below the national norms, according to Dr. Hammonds. "The first item will be to make sure we teach the material that the students failed," he said. "We should let students know that we expect them to score above the national norms," he later

Rev. Hosea Williams Presented As "Savior"

By Trelle L. Jeffers

With a loss of 100,000 people as reflected in the 1980 census, most of whom are affluent, and with the mayoral election two years away, grass root leaders in Atlanta, Georgia, have begun focusing their attention on the grooming of suitable candidates who can capture and reflect the sentiments of the inner city voters, most of whom are poor and powerless and further debilitated by inflation; a high crime rate; dilapidated, yet expensive, housing; inadequate schools, and a high unemployment rate.

State Representative

Hosea Williams, former field organizer for the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., is one of the persons who has risen to the forefront of this effort and is now being represented in Atlanta as the only follower of Dr. King whose attention is still focused on the needs of poor people.

Acclaimed for his 105 jailings, which are said to have been caused by his fights for the poor, Rev. Williams is presented as the only leader who is continually involved in a struggle to improve life for Atlanta's poor.

Malone Appointed Assistant Vice Chancellor For Relations

William P. Malone has been appointed Assistant Vice-Chancellor for University Relations at North Carolina Central University.

The appointment was announced this week by Chancellor Albert N. Whiting, and will become effective September 1.

Malone has served as the university's Director of Development since 1968 and (since 1973) as Executive Director of the North Carolina Central University Foundation.

Dr. S. Dallas Simmons, Vice-Chancellor for University Relations, is currently accepting applications for the development director's post.

Malone will assist Dr. Simmons in the administration of the University Relations division, which includes the Office of Admissions, the Alumni Affairs office, the Athletic Department, the Career Counseling and Placement Bureau, the Development Office, the News Bureau, the Public Relations Office, and the Security Department.

He will also have responsibility for coordination of university records relating to administrative and policy decisions, and for the development of a comprehensive university calendar.

Malone is a native of Durham and attended the city's public schools. He holds the bachelor of science and the master of science in public health degrees from NCCU. He is a veteran of five years of service in the U.S. Army during World War II, having served three years in the South Pacific.

He was an instructor in public health education at NCCU (then North Carolina College) from 1947 to 1949. From 1949 to 1953 he was a public health investigator, employed jointly by the Federal Security Agency, the U.S. Public Health Service, and the North Carolina State Board of Health.

From 1953 to 1960, Malone was a School Health Coordinator in Greensboro, High Point, and Guilford County, and a public health investigator for the Guilford County Health Department.

Malone rejoined North Carolina Central University in 1960 as Director of Placement, holding the post until 1967.

He has served on the board of the North Carolina Museum of Life and Science, the travel and convention committee of the Durham Chamber of Commerce, the Durham Child Advocacy Commission, and the board of the Durham Public Relations Society.

He is currently a lay-reader at St. Titus Episcopal Church in Durham, a member of the board of United Durham Incorporated, a board member of Concern for Children in Durham, and a board member for the Episcopal diocesan home for the aged in Southern Pines, the Penick Home.

Malone has been a consultant to the National Institutes of Health, The Robert R. Moton Memorial Institute, University Associates of Washington, D.C., and the College Placement Council.

The National Medical Association (NMA) is hard at work putting the finishing touches on its upcoming 85th annual convention to be held in Dallas, Texas, August 1-7 which, according to Dr. Charles Mitchell, general convention chairman, should be the most significant medical conference of the year. "The structure of the medical profession is changing, particularly in light of our inflationary economy. Physicians have been forced to re-examine their roles in the communities they serve. This year's NMA convention will discuss the pressing issues within the medical profession and forge an agenda to deal with them effectively," said Mitchell. This year's NMA conference, being held at the Lowes Anatole, is organized around the theme of Maternal and Child Health - Focus for the Eighties, and is expected to draw nearly 4,000 participants.

The 1980 convention has a number of unique features, provocative speakers and exciting workshops. For the first time, the nation's black professional organizations (doctors, lawyers, dentists, nurses, and pharmacists) are holding their annual conventions in the same city, at the same time. Collectively over 12,000 black professionals are expected to conclave in Dallas, August 1-7 for what has been termed the nation's first Black Congress on Health and Law. A professional coalition will likely emerge from the Congress to address a number of relevant socioeconomic and public policy issues.

A highlight of the NMA convention is expected to be an address by Patricia Harris, Secretary of Health and Human Services, (formerly Health Education and Welfare) who will deliver the keynote address on August 5. Later that evening, Benjamin Hooks, executive Director of the NAACP will deliver the public welcoming speech.

Enlightening discussions will be held at several seminars during the 7-day NMA conference. National Health Insurance, Federally Subsidized Abortion and Urban Health Care Centers are just a few of the issues that will be addressed.

In an effort to continue the education of its membership and to keep them apprised of the state of the art within the profession, the NMA is planning seventeen medical assemblies for physicians. Topics of the workshops include, but will not be limited to, Adolescent Pregnancy, Medical Counseling, and Family Nutrition.

Quality health care is of paramount concern to all Americans. The National Medical Association, a professional organization that represents over 9,000 black physicians, is dedicated to fostering the delivery of high quality health care to all segments of the American public. The NMA, founded in 1895, was not conceived in a spirit of racial exclusiveness and operates on behalf of the entire professional and the nation's citizenry.

For further information regarding the NMA, its accomplishments, and the upcoming convention, please contact Thomas Hart, conference media coordinator 659-9623.

ESC, County Schools And Wake Social Services Adopt Method Of Killing Two Birds With One Stone

RALEIGH - The Employment Security Commission, the Wake County Schools and the Wake County Department of Social Services have hatched a method of killing two birds with one stone. The stone is the school bus monitor program which employs welfare mothers as monitors. The program, the only one of its kind in the nation, employed 74 Wake County welfare mothers who were enrolled in the Work Incentive Program (WIN). Beginning in December 1979, the mothers rode buses to and from 27 county schools and worked during the day as teacher aides, cafeteria workers, office assistants and maintenance workers. The program was specially designed to meet the transportation needs of welfare recipients.

The $40,000 a month

program, funded through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), has meant a chance for women like Mrs. Gwendolyn Chalmers to get off welfare and back into the world of work. A divorced mother of three and a grandmother of one, Chalmers began receiving benefits in 1976 when she became critically ill and had to quit her job as a cashier at a doughnut shop. She was physically unable to work for the next three years.

Chalmers said the mothering talents she acquired in 23 years of child-rearing proved invaluable when she boarded Bus 166 last December on her first trip to Farmington Woods Elementary School. Chalmers was responsible for keeping almost 50 children ages five to 11 quiet, happy and seated during their 45-minute journey from Westford Road in Raleigh to Cary.

Chalmers, a quiet but assertive woman, developed a method of maintaining discipline on her bus and she said she had no serious discipline problems.

"Nobody ever gave me any real trouble. I had some kindergarteners who

Richmond's Black Mayor To Address Grads

Henry L. Marsh, III, recently re-elected Mayor of Richmond, Va., will deliver the keynote address during Elizabeth City State University's Ninety-Third Commencement Exercise, Sunday, July 20. The Exercise, a Summer Commencement, is set for 10:00 a.m. in Moore Hall auditorium.

Approximately 42 graduating seniors will be awarded undergraduate degrees in the arts and sciences, up from last summers total of 25, and bringing to 323 the total number of graduates this year.

"Because of the growing number of seniors who complete all requirements for graduation during the Summer School Sessions, a Commencement at this time of year is becoming increasingly necessary," Dr. Edyth B. Cole, Director of the ECSU Summer School Program, stated.

After serving for eleven years as a member of the City council, in 1977 Marsh became the first black Mayor of the former Confederate capitol. A native of Richmond and a graduate of Virginia Union and Howard Universities, he is a partner in the law firm of Hill, Tucker and Marsh.

Selected, in 1978, by International City Managers Association as the only elected official to serve on a special Task Force to

ANYBODY BUT CARTER

While the national Republican Party convention goes on this week in Detroit's new Joe Louis Arena, Michigan's unemployed crowd the floors of Detroit's unemployment offices to file for their unemployment compensation. Not one among the crowd interviewed expressed intentions of voting for President Jimmy Carter in the November 4 elections. "Anybody but Carter" was the general sentiment expressed whether they knew anything about other candidates or not.

4000 Carolinians Being Mailed Federal Funds

RALEIGH - The state Employment Security Commission announced Friday, July 11 that more than $1 million in federal funding for several special unemployment programs has been received and that checks which have been withheld since early June when funds were exhausted are now being mailed to the approximately 4,000 North Carolinians who were affected.

ESC Chairman J.B. Archer said the funds were made available Thursday, July 10 following Congressional approval of the federal supplemental budget. When the funds for these programs were exhausted in early June, the commission continued to write the benefit checks

but new unemployment

Congress approved additional funding.

Those checks, numbering approximately 14,000, are being mailed today to people whose unemployment benefits are based on recent federal civilian employment, military service, employment as a Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) public service employee, and those unemployed because of the adverse impact of foreign trade.

"We are sorry for the hardships these holdups in unemployment benefits may have caused these people," Archer said. "But I would like to caution the recipients to cash these checks as soon as possible."
