New Fall Makeup Looks Opulent, Oriental & In Colorful Mood

One sure way to lift your spirits and feel like a million, is to try the new Oriental makeup shades coming for fall.

This opulent mood is apparent in Flori Roberts Shades of the Orient collection, with three distinct color groupings to choose and use in a myriad of exotic looks.

Dynasty Orchid, a lush, deep magenta, is a favored leader in the popular plum tones. Burnt almond, a burnished brown, has the depth and richness so important. Dragon Fire, a dark golden ruby, is a strong choice among the reds. Whichever you choose though, you'll want to use the new application techniques for best results.

Try eyeshadow in different combinations: using violets with plums, or teals with sparkle browns. Remember most makeup artists don't use a single shade on the lid. They bring color around the lower edge of the eye, stroke deep tone in the lid crease, add highlighter, and use a pencil to outline.

Blusher's can work beauty magic. If you've been using it only on cheeks, have a fling at blushing your forehead, nose tip and chin. Apply two coordinating shades, placing the deeper tone in the cheek hollow, the lighter on the cheekbone. Experiment with the plum contouring blushers.

Next, work on your lips. Outlining lips gives a sure shape to them. Lip pencils perform wonders in defining lips, preventing color from "bleeding" into tiny lines around the mouth.

Shades of the Orient makeup by Flori Roberts will be introduced in U. S. department stores this fall. Oriental horoscopes and fortune cookies will be given with every purchase.
