

Triangle To Be Marketed As Region

The concept of marketing the Triangle area as a region as a prospective center for business and industrial expansion has been endorsed by the Triangle J Council of Government's Economic Development Policy Advisory Committee. The Committee urged, however, that any marketing concept should be sensitive to the individual needs of the TJCOC's member counties. TJCOC's member counties include Chatham, Durham, Johnston, Lee, Orange, and Wake. The Committee endorsed the concept in its quarterly meeting this week.

How the region is to be marketed or how the program is to be funded has not yet been determined.

James V. Camp, director of Economic Development for the Durham Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Regional Policy Advisory Committee, presented an overview of the North Carolina Department of Commerce's proposed Urban-Regional Marketing Program at the meeting. The state is proposing to market nine such metropolitan areas in the state, including the Triangle J region.

Chapel Hill Mayor pro tem Jonathan Howes strongly urged the state to integrate local government into the planning for its marketing program. Howes pointed out that the TJCOC has just completed an extensive economic assessment of the region with the aid of the Research Triangle Institute. Data from this study will reveal the unique economic characteristics and trends of the region which need to be considered by the state.

Committee member Robert P. Pace, Cary developer, added that the six county area did not have adequate space to accommodate the quality growth desired through the proposed marketing effort without careful planning and investment strategies.

The issue of the regional marketing program concept was addressed at the full council meeting of the TJCOC on October 22.

HISTORY

The National Urban League was founded in 1910 to improve the lives and jobs of black Americans. Today it hopes to help all minority groups in a variety of ways.

For more than two generations, an organization has been working to help keep more minority people working.

The Urban League maintains a national skills bank. Its centralized computer system receives information from employers and employees across the U.S.

The League also has a law enforcement minorities' manpower project. That group works to increase the recruitment and hiring of black and other minority group policemen.

The League's Labor Education Program is also helping people leap ahead. It aids those who want to obtain training and employment in well-paying construction jobs.

The Urban League, it appears, is going a long way toward improving the lives of many minority Americans.
