stimulating and often provocative "By The Way" commentaries, which are heard on black-oriented radio stations, and published in black newspapers throughout the United States. He asserts "My 'By The Ways' are not done to gain me popularity, but to provoke our young blacks to 'see for themselves, listen for themselves, and think for themselves'... The messages I present reflect the problems facing the black community today, as I see them... Our Youth must not be allowed to get hung up by reacting with a purely emotional response to black problems, to a point where they lose the capacity to think for themselves."

Vice president, Special Markets Department for the Greyhound Corporation since 1969, Joe Black is responsible for creating, developing and implementing programs that reach, motivate and assist the black consumer market; to that end, he has put into effect a scholarship program on selected predominantly black colleges; implemented the utilization of minority group entrepreneurs for the purchasing of goods and services; placed advertising in black owned and black oriented media outlets. Additionally, he sponsors various community relations programs which are geared to give praise and recognition to good, productive community action of black men and women, and seminars offering informational assistance to senior citizens and youth.

A respected educator, graduate of Morgan State University, a black college, he has been awarded the Doctorate of Humane Letters by Shaw College at Detroit and King Memorial College in Columbia, S.C.; and a Doctorate of Law by Central State University.

Durham Hosts N.C. Desert Spring Conference

The North Carolina Spring Conference of the Prince Hall Shriners which was held in Durham recently was termed very successful. Zafa Temple No. 176 and Imran Temple No. 168 of Henderson were hosts for the occasion.

Over 400 Nobles and Daughters from the Desert of North Carolina attended. The Desert of North Carolina is composed of sixteen Temples and sixteen Courts throughout the state. Jesse Young presided over the activities of the Nobles, while Mrs. Adeline Spaulding presided over the activities of the Daughters.

Both groups attended workshops in the areas of Officer Training, Talent and Scholarship, Finance, Mental Retardation and Organization of Procedures.

Reports were made on Mental Retardation, American Cancer Society and American Lung Association, and the financial status of the Desert.

Social activities highlighting the program were the Deputies' Ball, which was held at the Durham Civic Center and the Talent and Scholarship Program, which was won by Miss Mona Reynolds of Greensboro, second place was won by Miss Shamia Truitt, and third place by Miss Yolanda Lee.

The Conference ended with the group attending St. Mark's AME Zion Church, where the Palm Sunday message was delivered by the minister, Rev. Howard E. Haggler and music was by the Cathedral Choir of the church.
