AUTO TALK

I Swear This is the Best One!

By Bob Koehler

For good reasons we either say this ourselves or we hear other people say "I wouldn't drive or own any other pickup than a (Ford, Chevy etc)." When I was a few years younger—quite a few—I could be heard saying that about the Fords I was driving and had driven.

For some reason car owners nowadays don't seem to have the same amount of "swear-by" allegiance we had in the good old days. Except when it comes to pickup trucks: that's a different story. I think truck owners have good reasons to feel the way they do about the trucks they will swear by.

Of course, when a pickup truck owner swears by his make and model, he also will tell you, "Whatever you do, don't ever buy the other makes." J. Barrows of Cumberland, Maine, wrote and asked what to do when you're trying to buy a pickup and all the current owners sound like factory salespeople? They swear theirs is best and the only one to buy. He also asked if I had some rule of thumb to follow in deciding which one to buy.

The first part of Barrows' question is one of the reasons pickups are the hottest-selling vehicles in the country today. Ford and Chevrolet have been building trucks over the last decade that are without a doubt great machines. The Dodge trucks are great, too, but they've stayed out of this market for some time and have some catching up to do. To swear by what I think, I must say whether you buy a Ford, Chevrolet or Dodge pickup, each is as good as the other. And I know for many those who are fighting words!

Now for a rule of thumb in the great pickup sales race. Car Bob says if you like the way it looks and the price is right and you think the dealer will take good care of you, then buy it. You should at least drive similar models of all the big three before buying, so you have an idea about the pricing.

And I know there are other companies that make pickups. However, my vote goes to the big three U.S. builders. Thanks for your letter. Your Car Bob hat is on its way to you.

The time it takes to connect these dots could keep you from hitting your child.

time you feel like hitting your child, try another approach. Do something like playing this game together. Or any game that gives you both the time you need to cool off. Try it out. You'll both be glad you did. For a free booklet, Write "Parenting" P.O. Box 2866P, Chicago, Illinois 60690.

Let's Work Together to Prevent Child Abuse

(NAPS)—In 1992, more than 2.9 million children were reported to child protective services around the country because of suspected child abuse or neglect. And those were the cases that were reported. Also that year 1,261 children died because of maltreatment. Most were very young—in fact, more than 80 percent were under the age of five.

Of reports of child abuse, about 15 percent involve sexual abuse, most involving an adult who is related to or well known by the child. Sexual abuse occurs in all groups of the population, in urban and rural areas, and in all racial, economic and cultural groups.

All forms of abuse hurt children, but the effects vary depending on the nature of the act and the age of the child. It is important that children learn to say "No" to unwanted advances and, when abuse does occur, that they tell someone. Also, children should never be made to feel that they were responsible for the abuse.

We should not feel helpless to prevent child abuse and neglect. There are actions individuals can take to support agencies and organizations that are devoted to preventing abuse and neglect and providing help for troubled families.

By becoming part of the national, nonpartisan Children's Campaign, you can make a difference for abused and neglected children. It is a network of citizens from all around the country who do such things as write letters and make calls to legislators to support and work for public policies to benefit children and families. They speak out with local organizations in their communities that assist at-risk children and their families.
