

FOR THE MINERVA.

Messrs. Editors, If notwithstanding the abundance of valuable political and miscellaneous information which at present crowds your paper, you can find room for the following, and think it worthy of insertion, the object of its writer will be attained.

LINES

SUGGESTED BY THE SIGHT OF A MISER.

Lo! sullen Care, advancing, takes his seat Full in the watch worn forehead of that wretch, Who, brooding o'er his copious heaps of gold, Late in the silent cellar anxious sits. The secret vault with cautious eye explored, His trembling hand the iron portal lifts, And he, with gloomy satisfaction, views The shining piles of wealth by artifice stored. His haggard eyes the light of joy emit, Mix'd with the gleam of baleful discontent: He feels the coils, with rapture counts it o'er, Yet every moment starts and stares around. Terror and conscious guilt oppress him. Thus From the sight of injured man, mistrustful Hides the miser, curs'd Satan's best beloved. His woe, a thrice told, the mummy lid is closed. On his hard surface he extended lies In filthy rags, nor tastes the calm repose Of spotless innocence, but nightly keeps His restless vigils there; or, if at length, Exhausted nature sinks to broken rest, Terrific dreams his tortur'd fancy haunt With horrid phantoms of corroding fear. He nought of pleasure knows, but ends a life Worn out in watching and anxiety, Without one blessing from a fellow man, But with ten thousand curses sinks in death.

It oft abates the last sad pangs of death To think, that in the breasts of friends below'd Our memories shall live, and still our graves Be wet with tears of sorrow's esteem. How wretched he, deprived of even this solace, Whom sordid artifice sunk so low in guilt, That he's by no one loved—by all detested.

ALEXIS.

PROPHECIES.

Extract from the Prophecies of the famous Mr. Brothier, in 1792.

The prophet Daniel, chap. vii, ver. 3. "And four great beasts came up from the sea, different one from another."

"4. The first was like a lion, and it had eagle's wings. I beheld till the wings were plucked, when it was lifted up from the earth, and made to stand upon his feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it."

The lion means George III. the present king of England. Plucking the wings of the lion, means taking away the power of the king. Made to stand on the feet as a man, with a man's heart, means his reduction to the condition of other men and possessing similar thoughts.

The Spanish monarchy will cease with this war, and the sadhuldership of Holland will be cut off close to the ground; according to the visions of God to me in 1792, and which I communicated at that time, by his sacred command, to the king and queen of England.

The Dutch will acknowledge the French republic, and make a hasty peace with it; the Portuguese and Prussians will do the same.

The United States of America will declare war against England; but before they do, France will lose all her West India islands; and after they do, Jamaica will be the last in the possession of the English.

[It is remarkable, that all the above prophecies of Brothers, the fanatic, have been verified, excepting the latter part of the last.] Whig.

FIRE AT PITTSBURG, (Pa.)

Extract of a letter, dated Pittsburg, July 24.

"I arrived here last evening, three days after leaving Bedford Springs. Being a great deal fatigued with a hard days ride, I went to bed early, and in about two hours after, I was awakened by the cry of fire; which, on looking out of the window, I perceived to be within twenty yards of the place where I slept. In the course of two hours, six or seven brick houses, and I cannot tell how many wooden ones, were destroyed. The evening was very calm, or there is no conjecturing where the ravages would have stopped. It happened that several of the largest houses in the place were at some distance from where the fire commenced, and opposed the progress of the flames by their high brick walls; several of these took fire themselves; but the exertions that were used to extinguish them succeeded. It burnt every house in Market street, from front street to the river, and a number in Market street, in all, including wood-ens, from ten to twenty."

Political.

From the National Intelligencer.

We have seen with great regret and surprise the many misrepresentations of the views of the government which are daily published in the federal prints. At a time like this, when the exertions of every individual should be directed to an efficient prosecution of the war, solemnly declared by the constituted authorities, such misrepresentations cannot but have the most baneful influence as well on the present as on the future prospects of our country.

To put an end to them so far as is in our power, we will remark, that although the government are making the most vigorous efforts to prosecute the war against England with effect, they are disposed to accommodate all differences on the most reasonable conditions.

As an inducement to the British government not to impress seamen from our vessels, our government is yet willing, as it is well known it has long been, to enter into an arrangement, to be reciprocal, to prevent the employment of British seamen in American vessels, public or private. Such an arrangement would put an end to all pretext on the part of Great Britain for impressing men from our vessels, and the great advantage she would derive from it, if her own object, as is alleged, is to get her own subjects, ought to induce her to accede to it: for it must be evident that the exclusion of British seamen from our service would secure to her more than she can gain by impressment; seamen must have employment, and the exclusion of those of Great Britain from our service would confine them in a great measure to that of their own country. Such an arrangement, then, would be advantageous to Great Britain merely as an expedient to increase her maritime strength, while it would have the effect of bringing into our service our own seamen, and also of augmenting their numbers.

It is highly important to both countries that this question should be settled, for experience has shown that there cannot be a good understanding between them until Great Britain ceases to impress our seamen.

We state with pleasure another fact which we believe to be equally true—that our government will not, under any circumstances that may occur, form a political connexion with France. To the injuries received from her, a just sensibility has always been felt. The war with England has not abated it, nor has it diminished the zeal or weakened the effort to obtain redress. The idea of a political connexion with France as an expedient to extort justice from England, is treated with disdain by every person connected with the government. It is not desirable to enter the lists with the two great belligerents at once; but if England acts with wisdom, and France perseveres in her career of injustice and folly, we should not be surprised to see the attitude of the United States change towards those powers. We are now at war with England; let her government do us justice—let the other continue to refuse it; and from that moment we have no doubt that the U. States will assume a correspondent relation with both.

The United States are placed by the injustice of the belligerents in an important crisis; but we are confident they will go through it with honor and advantage. If the citizens of the U. States make common cause and support with energy and decision the measures of the government, the result is certain. They will obtain what they have a right to demand, first of Great Britain and afterwards of France. Success in this struggle will secure them the respect of both the belligerents and of all Europe.—It will also secure them a permanent peace, and in other respects a just reward for all our exertions. We are confident that nothing will be wanting on the part of the government to ensure success. It has boldly taken on itself a great responsibility, one which the exigency of the times required, and we are satisfied it will acquit itself to the just expectations of the country.—Nat. Intel.

THE ENGLISH STALLION RESTLESS.

WILL stand the present season, (now commenced and to end the 1st August) my stable in Salisbury, and will be let to mares at 20 dollars the season, payable with 16 dollars on the 1st January, 1813: 10 dollars the single horse to be paid when the mare is covered, with the privilege of turning to the season by the payment of 5 dollars more on receiving the second cover, 10 dollars to ensure a mare to be in foal, which may be discharged with 52 dollars, on or before the 1st January aforesaid.

RESTLESS is a fine bay, full 16 hands high and unites, what is very rare, transcendent beauty with matchless strength. His blood is equal to any horse ever imported; being the son of Plover nomen, one of the most celebrated sons of his rod; and out of Dutchess by Le Sang, one of the best race-horses of her day, having won 23 races in succession, 4 mile and 4 mile heats.

Restless is the only horse in America, and perhaps the only horse now living that ever ran four miles in 7 minutes 30 1-2 seconds. This he did in the great subscription at York, on Wednesday the 21st August 1793—see Sporting Magazine for 1794 5, page 186.

For a more minute account of the pedigree and performance of this wonderful horse, and also of the performance of his colts, reference can be had to my bills.
