DECLARATION OF THE ALLIES.

CONCLUDED FROM OUR LAST. France, restored to the dimensions which ages of glory and prosperity, under the dominion THE President of the U. States has made of her kings, had assured to her, was to share a requisition through the Secretary of War upon this Excellency the Governor of this State, by letter of the independence and peace. It depended only on the diate service, seven thousand of the Militia of this State, but a government, by a single word to put an end independence and peace. It depended only on her government, by a single word to put an end the sufferings of the nation, to restore to her with peace her colonies, her commerce, and the free exercise of her industry. Could she wish as soldiers exclusive of Officers ; the following numbers for more? The powers had offered to discuss in a spirit of conciliation, her wishes concerning objects of possession of mutual convenience which were not included within the limits of France, before the war of the revolution.

Fifteen days clapsed without any reply on the part of the French government. The plenipoentiaries of the allies insisted upon a peremptoterm for the acceptance or refusal of the conditions of peace. Liberty was given to the French plenipotentiary, to present a contre-project, provided it were such as to be a reply to the Bertie, spirit and substance of the conditions proposed by the allied courts. The 10th of March was fixed on as the term by general consent. The French plenipotentiary produced, at the expiration of the term, only propositions for discus- Craven. sion. Far from approximating the object, they Caswell,

A new term of a few days was granted at they request of the plenipotentiary of France. Fimally on the 15th of Murch, this plenipotentiary offered a contre project, which no longer left it in doubt that the sufferings of France had not changed the views of its government. Revoking then what it had itself proposed, the French Gates, covernment demanded in a new proposition, that people foreign to the French spirit, whom ages of domination would not confound with the rench nation, should yet make a part of Frauce.

tended only to prolong fruitless negociations.

France must preserve dimensions incompatible with the establishment of a system of equilibirum, and out of proportion with the other great political bodies in Europe, she must Jones, preserve the posts and offensive points, by Johnston, means of which her government, to the misfortime of Europe and of France, has occasioned the overthrow of so many thrones, and wrought so many revolutions—members of the reigning family of France must be placed upon foreign thrones—the French government, in fine, that covernment which has sought to reign over Europe, not less by discord than by force of irms, must remain the arbiter of the interior relations, and of the fate of the powers of Eu-

The allied courts, in continuing the negociations under such auspices, would have been wanting in every thing which they owed to themselves; they would have from that moment reounced the glories which they had anticipated or themselves; their efforts would have been only turned against their own people. In signng a treaty upon the basis of the French conthe allied powers would have placed irms in the hands of their common enemy, they would have deceived the expectations of nations and the confidence of their allies.

It was at a moment so decisive for the safety of the world, that the allied sovereigns renewed the solemn engagement that they would not lay down their arms until they had effected the grand object of their alliance,- France cay charge the evils which she suffers only upon ber own government. Peace alone can close the wounds which a spirit of domination, universal, and without example in the annals of the world, has brought upon her. This peace shall be that of Europe. Every other is inadmissible. It is time at last, that princes should without foreign influence, watch over the welfare of their people; that nations should reciprocally respect the independence of one another; that social institutions shold be safe against daily revolutions, and that property should be secure and commerce free.

after the muster rolls are received by them respectively. The president expresses a preference for uniform volunteer companies: the Officers aforesaid are therefore requested to use their best exertions to obtain as many of that species of force as possible.

This Detachment will be organized in companies of one hundred cach, battalions of 500; regiments of 1000; brigades from two to three thousand, and the whole to form one division. The General staff required by the President is one Major-General, three Brigadier-Generals; one Deputy-Quarter-Master-General, one Assistant-Deputy-Quarter-Master-General and one Assistant-Adjutant-General. This staff will be designated by the Gorernor. The commandants of regiments will designate the company officers. The Generals of Divisions and Brigades will recommend the Field officers.

In the selection of officers it is difficult to lay down any fixed rule, without its having an injurious effect when reduced to practice. Justice it would seem requires that the preference should be given to those of senior rank, but a stri t adherence to this principle might render the army almost inefficient. To be gov. erned by it when great injuries might be sustained would be improper. Therefore in recommendations the Officers making such, will be governed by merit, and not by seniority of grade.

The officers aforesaid will take the most effective measures to cause the returns to be made to them without delay, to the end that returns may be made to this Of fice in the shortest time possible. They will also transmit with the muster rolls to this Office a Roster of all the Field Officers who may volunteer their services, designating those recommended from the others.

It is expected that in complying with the present requisition, the ditisens of this state will manifest that zeal and promptness to their country's call, which has heretofore distinguished them on similar occasions.

By order of the Commander in Chief, RQBERT WILLIAMS, Adjutant General of the Militia of North-Carolina. N. B. The companies will be officered according to the militin laws. It is to be understood, that those persons heretofore enrolled in the detachment, whose time expired on the 10th of April last and who have served a tour of six months duty will be exempted from this draft
