The Supreme Court of the United States yesterday adjourned, after a session of nearly seven weeks. Of the cases on the docket, seventy were finally disposed of, and ten continued on orders to adduce further proof. The records of no court of appeals in the Union exhibit such an instance of dispatch of business where the questions in dispute are so momentous.

It gives us pleasure to announce that every case in which the United States were concerned, received due attention; and not a single case which was reached was continued at the instance of the Attorney General. In 23 of the 70 cases finally decided the United States were parties, and four other cases were argued for the United States, but not finally decided, a proof of the great industry and attention to official duty on the part of the law-officer of the United States.—ib.

The honorable Mr. Bagot, minister from St. James, has arrived at Crawford's Hotel, in this town. This gentleman is a son of Lord Bagot, by marriage is nearly allied to Lord Wellington, and for his last five years was under secretary of state for the foreign department. We understand, he has brought his lady and two children with him. In his suite is Mr. Chadd, secretary of legation. This gentleman is the author of the tour of Europe, the review of which may be found some numbers back in the Quarterly or Edinburgh review, we do not recollect which. Mr. Bagot it is to be hoped will remain in the country rather longer than Mr. Foster, and when he leaves it, leave it for a very different cause.

A very remarkable case, in testimony of the efficacy of vaccination, has occurred in this city, and within our own knowledge.

Solomon Hammond, lately one of the carriers of this paper, was a few days since taken by the small pox in the natural way. He soon became violently ill and at last died. He had three children, one of whom, a little boy aged 9 years, slept with him while diseased with the small pox, until within two days of his death. The boy was vaccinated two years ago. There is not the slightest reason to apprehend that there is wanting at this day, proof of the efficacy of vaccination. But if such proof were wanting, this case would satisfy the most obstinate. The little boy and the other two smaller children, vaccinated also, are perfectly well.

Extract of a letter from an officer on board the U. S. frigate United States, to his friend in this city, dated

"MALAGA ROADS, JAN. 4, 1816.
"I have just heard of an instance of human calamity which ought forever to cause me to thank God that I have been permitted to live under a flag which has never been stained by a flagrant act of national injustice. The name of Gen. Castanos must be familiar to you. It was he who so bravely defended Saragossa from the French, and against whom he on so many other occasions, crowned the arms of his cold-hearted country with success. That Castanos left this port yesterday, with a number of other prisoners, chained and in irons, to serve as a private soldier for ten years on the coast of Barbary.—Alas, how unforeseen are the events of this transitory life!!

FROM THE ALBANY ARGUS, MARCH 19.
Canadian Affairs.—About a year ago, the provincial assembly of Lower Canada preferred certain charges against two of their judges, Sewall and Monk, and claimed to be permitted to substantiate them before the council. Their request was refused, altercation ensued, and the governor dissolved the assembly by proclamation. On the 24th ult. the question was agitated by the new assembly, who approved the conduct of their predecessors, and resolved to carry up an appeal to the throne for a redress of grievances. On the opening of the next meeting, a message was announced from the governor, declaring the assembly dissolved. A meeting was subsequently called of the citizens of Montreal, evidently to approve the conduct of the governor in dissolving the assembly. The meeting was attended by about 200 of the principal inhabitants. The subject underwent a long discussion, and finally a resolution was moved approbatory of the governor's conduct, and rejected by a great majority.

NEW-YORK, MARCH 15.
A Proclamation has been issued in Lower Canada, for calling a new Parliament. The election to be held previous to the 25th of April next. The present parliament has been abruptly dissolved for its conduct in respect to the Judges since the Prince Regent and his council acquitted them.

It is reported (and we are inclined to believe it) that the famous Lavalette, who escaped from prison in Paris, arrived at this port on Thursday night in the brig Eugene from Havre.

The St. Louis paper of February 24, states, that a letter had been received from Mr. Boullvin, Indian agent at Prairie du Chien, of a late date, describing his situation as extremely irksome, surrounded by hostile savages who are in the daily habit of intercourse with the British traders, who urge them to hold themselves in readiness for another war; stating that the French government having now joined the English, the Americans would be attacked in the spring, and enjoining it on the Indians to prevent the American troops ascending the Mississippi to the Prairie, and in no wise to dispose of any of their lands. They are invited to a grand council to be held at Malden, where they will receive presents from their English father, also, be instructed in the kind of deportment they are to exhibit to the Americans.

A soft way of saying a bitter thing.—We understand that the republican Caucus at Washington on Saturday evening, agreed to recommend James Monroe as a candidate for the Presidency and Daniel D. Tompkins as a candidate for the Vice Presidency of the U. States. It is understood that the nominating of Governor Tompkins is considered as a compliment to his patriotic services during the war, but that the interest of the republican party in N. York and their horror at the idea of the possibility of the election of a man of such principles as Rufus King, will determine Governor Tompkins to decline the Vice Presidency, and continue the republican candidate for the office of Governor of New-York.—Dem. Letters from Egypt, of the 26th July, state, that Mahommed Ali, the reigning viceroy, who had undertaken personally, the late expedition against the Wahabee Arabs, has at length terminated it with complete success. After driving them from Mecca, Medina, and the ports along the Red Sea, taking possession of their great inland capital Tarabe, &c. the strong hold on which they chiefly depended, he effected their total defeat, by pursuing them to the remotest confines of their territory.

An interesting account of the voyage of the bold but unfortunate La Peyrouse, who sailed from France about 23 years since on a voyage of discovery, and respecting whose fate so much conjecture has been made—is in the papers—and was obtained from M. Dagelet, the astronomer, who accompanied Peyrouse—and who was taken off from a rock, in 1815, at the east of the Phillipine islands. It appears that one of Peyrouse's two vessels, after leaving Botany Bay, in 1788, struck upon a chain of rocks and was lost—crew saved by Perouse's vessel—they afterwards discovered an island in the S. E. of New Zealand, and anchored in the bay—when his vessel accidentally caught on fire and was consumed—that the natives during the first 21 years were amicably disposed—but Perouse, tired of waiting for relief, and anxious to return home, ordered trees to be felled for timber to build a vessel—the natives considered this as an act of hostility, war commenced, and finally Perouse, and all who were with him were massacred, except Dagelet and 17 others, who escaped, after great perils, in birch canoes to the place where he was found, and where he had resided two years—those who escaped with him had all died—and Dagelet himself died a few days after he was taken from off the rock. His journal of events was preserved, and deposited at Macoa, from whence the account is received.

Nearly a year ago, we remember to have seen a floating rumor in the English papers, that the Dauphin of France was still alive, and in the custody of the Mayor of Lyons. This rumor shared the fate of many other reports of the same character—it lived its little day, fluttered and expired. It has been since revived, and brought to light, with some circumstances, which wear so much the complexion of romance, that in a dearth of foreign intelligence, it may tend to the amusement of our readers. The facts are reported to be these, that in the year 1800, a young Drummer in the Austrian service, employed in the garrison stationed at Pafosna, was sentenced to run the gauntlet. As the corporal was proceeding to inflict the sentence, the young culprit desired to be conducted to the commander of the garrison, to whom he announced himself as the son of the murdered Louis. He earnestly pressed for an interview with his sister, whom it will be remembered is the Duchess of Angouleme, then residing at Vienna. He was then sent to the Austrian general, Melas, whose head quarters were at Turin. While he remained at Turin, he was recognized by an old Swiss, who had formerly been in the service of Louis. He is reported to have told his story: that when by the command of that sanguinary monster, Robespierre, he was bound an apprentice to a shoemaker, his master Simon was at heart a royalist, and devoted to the Bourbons. That Simon treated him with much apparent harshness, to elude the suspicion of the police at Paris, while he was secretly maturing a plan for his escape. His master received the orders of Robespierre to poison his apprentice. He pretended to have complied with his demands; but in fact, substituted the dead body of a child of the same age with his apprentice, and the difference of the physiognomy, was ascribed to the effect of the poison. His master then secreted him in his own house for several days, and at last furnished him with a guide, and a sum of money to defray his expenses to Bordeaux. From thence he set sail for Corsica, where his companion died, and the young man reduced to great pecuniary distress, engaged in the capacity of a servant, to keep a coffee-house at Bastia. Hearing that his sister was at Vienna, he embarked and sailed for Venice, from whence he had passports to Vienna, to which place he was travelling on foot. On his way he fell in with a party of Austrian recruits, who compelled him to enlist as a drummer in their service; his tender age incapacitating him from bearing arms. This is the story which he is reported to have told to general Melas, who dispatched a courier to Vienna with the intelligence. Orders arrived to have the prisoner tried by a court martial, and he was promised that if he told the truth, his sentence should be remitted; but that if he persisted in falsehood, he should, on detection, suffer death. The account adds that he persisted in his declaration, and that he shortly afterwards disappeared, no person knowing whether he had gone.

It states notwithstanding, that he was compelled to run the gauntlet, and that when the corporal was stripping off his shirt, the prisoner exclaimed, what an indignity for a Bourbon! This is the amount of this wonderful story, of which we may be allowed to remark, that we do not believe one word of it. If this candidate for the throne of the Bourbons had been brought into the presence of the Dutches of Angouleme, the imposture, if there was one, might have been easily detected. It would be impossible for this young man to impose upon her. She would be able to call up so many confidential scenes of their early years that an impostor in his personation of the character of her brother, would be thrown from his guard. Nevertheless, stories as incredible as this have endangered the security of crowns, and plunged kingdoms and empires into all the horrors of civil war.—Balt. Telegraph.

To Correspondents.—The length of two communications, respecting the death of the lamented Mr. Thompson prevents either from being inserted. The last number of S. H. S. jr. and the communication signed Cato are also laid aside. The latter contains some useful information and much just remark; but as the persons spoken of are but little known in this state, the warfare would perhaps be a little unfair in regard to them and somewhat uninteresting to the majority of our readers. It is probable "Zerubbabel" will appear in our next. If he can, as of old, lay the foundation of a second temple, he ought to have all our good wishes; but does he not propose a task by much too mighty for the pigny effort of a newspaper essay?
