

JONES & PENDLETON, Prop'rs.

Wednesday, April 22, 1874.

PLATO DURHAM ESQ.—INDEPENDENT CANDIDATES.

Says the Warrenton Gazette: "Plato Durham, who in 1869 was one of the leading lights of Democracy, has declared himself a candidate for Congress, and solicits the votes of his brother Radicals."

The Gazette is misinformed, or else we are.

We are not the apologist of Mr. Durham, nor of any other man or set of men. But where it is in our power to remedy a manifest injustice, we shall not hesitate to do so, be it for the benefit of friend or foe.

Mr. Durham, as we understand him, is not soliciting Radical votes; but is running for Congress as an Independent Conservative. In a speech in Shelby, on the 8th inst., he said that "he had entered upon the Congressional race and proposed to run it through on an independent plan; that he had been charged with lack of fealty to the Democratic party, and it was not true; that he had been abused and misrepresented when his hands were tied, and that he was still firm in his allegiance to the party he ever was."

Nothing could be plainer than these declarations, which added to information that we derive from other sources, convinces us that Mr. Durham is a professed opponent to Radicalism.

This much we deem it proper to say in justice to Mr. Durham, as he once acted nobly for North Carolina: of his subsequent actions we say nothing. But as we love our native State, and desire to see her rescued entirely from the defiling hands of the Radical party, we must say a word for her interests in this connection.

We are so firmly convinced that the dominance of the Conservative party is a necessity to the welfare of the State, that we look upon any man who jeopardizes the interests of that party as practically an enemy to the country, whatever may be his motives, however pure or however blameless. The defeat of Conservatism is the triumph of Radicalism. The triumph of Radicalism is ruin to the State.

To be convinced of this, we need only point to South Carolina and Louisiana, to say nothing of our own State, and of others that have been cursed by the dominance of the party of "Addition, Division and Silence."

Independent candidates for Conservative votes do most assuredly jeopardize the interests of the Conservative party. There is nothing imately wrong in independent candidates, but where it divides party, and thus gives an adversary a chance to run in between, and gain the victory, it becomes a great and aggravating wrong, and ought not to be tolerated. Regular nominations by regular conventions, unless they are fairly, squarely, and openly made. The people should pay no attention to nominations that are obtained by trickery or knavery.

Viewing the subject in this light, the State Executive Committee of our party, resolved to earnestly recommend the members of the Democratic Conservative party to discourage independent candidates, and all other disorganizers, and that all support be promptly withdrawn from every aspirant for office who shall oppose the regular nominations of the party.

The opponents embodied in this resolution will meet with a hearty response from every true-hearted Conservative in the State. The independent candidates are no better than an open foe. He is an adversary in the guise of a friend. He places himself in the attitude before the country, that in order to advance himself he is willing to sacrifice his party's interests—which is a form of selfishness to be condemned on all occasions.

We think it best for aspirants to office to pause long before coming out as independent candidates. They owe it to their friends and to their country. God, knows the Old North State has suffered enough from her Radical enemies! It will be hard indeed if she is called upon to suffer at the hands of ambitious men who profess to be her friends!

Mr. Durham said in his Shelby speech of April 8th, that it was not true, as charged, that he was faithless to the Democratic party, and that he was "still as firm in his allegiance to the party as he ever was." These are strong words; they may not be exact words; but we put them down as they were reported to us by a personal friend.

of his who was present and heard his speech. Independent candidates are inconsistent with fealty to party except where there is no candidate of the opposite party in the field; in which case the rule of course ceases with the necessity. If Mr. Durham or any other independent candidate wishes to prove his devotion to the country and his allegiance to the Conservative party, the best way to do it is to submit his name to the proper Conservative Convention. This is no time for Conservatives to jeopardize the success of the party by independent action.

The dispatches indicate that Grant will probably veto the Finance Bill. Tremendous "pressure" is being brought to bear on him by the Northern capitalists. "Pressure" is a thing it is hard for anybody to stand. It tries men's souls wonderfully. Wall street would find it profitable to invest a few million in a veto. But in spite of Grant's weakness for money, we believe he will stand firm in this matter. His chances for a third term are at stake.

Whatever be the fate of the Consolidation movement, between this and November, we think it due the people of Western North Carolina, that the next Legislature do everything in their power to secure the early completion of the line. Republicans object to the State of the means appropriated to the building of the Western Road. If the Conservatives can repair this great wrong, let it be done. It will mean.

We comment to the attention of our readers an article from the Shelby Banner on the Judgeship. We endorse every line of it. Men who will descend to trickery to obtain a judicial position show themselves unworthy of the honors they seek.

In another column, we publish the Resolutions recently adopted by the State Executive Committee of the Democratic-Conservative Party. The ideas therein expressed will no doubt meet with hearty approval throughout the Conservative ranks.

The average estimate of the cotton crop in the South this current year is about 4,785,883 bales. The crop was large enough last Fall, but what profit to the farmers? Few cleared more. It don't pay to raise cotton at 14 cents a pound.

When the Republicans had power in the State, they despoiled it of every dollar they could. What is the consolation we derive from this? That they should never be trusted with power again.

CONSOLIDATION.

Spirit of the State Press.

There could be no greater folly than for Conservatives to war upon a project that is struggling to complete such important railway connections, upon which the State has expended millions of dollars, without completing the lines. It is clearly then the policy of the Conservative party to stand by the friends of consolidation with all the moral power we can give, in their efforts to consolidate the railways in which the State is so largely interested, and which, if successfully accomplished, will not only augment the value of property, but also build up the commerce of the whole State.

[Radical Sentinel.]

The Stockholders and Directors should have remembered that only fifteen in the House, and nine in the Senate, were found to vote against the proposition to exclude dishonest men from the board of directors. We hold they cannot accept a part of the charter or consolidation bill which puts the people's money and bonds in the corporation, without accepting also that clause which excludes Billy Smith.

That exclusion was as much a part of the bill as the clause allowing them to issue bonds. It was all but one act, and must be received or rejected as one act. The Constitution has nothing to do with it. If Gov. Graham can depose Stanley as President of the Atlantic road, surely the legislature, when that body gives six millions of property to a corporation, may say no dishonest man shall have control of the property.

[Vindicator and Watchman.]

The Governor was there and promised to carry out the law to the letter if the act should be accepted. Let us have Peace.

BROOKS and SUMNER.—Somebody sends us a newspaper, wherein attention is called—for what purpose we are left to guess—to an address on the life and character of Charles Sumner, by a Michigan orator in which the following paragraph occurs: "A sprig of South Carolina chivalry—one Preston S. Brooks—thinking or pretending to think that the title, A. P. Butler, had been insulted by Sumner, armed to the teeth and accompanied by another chivalrous son of South Carolina, he stepped up to him as he sat at his desk in the Senate chamber and with a club struck him once, twice, three times, until he fell stunned, senseless and bleeding upon the floor; and even then the cowardly assailant continued to rain blow after blow upon his prostrate form. The whole North reeled under those blows, and after that it was as impossible to bridge the great gulf between slavery and freedom as it was to reach across the gulf, between slavery and freedom as it was to reach across the gulf between Abraham and Dives."

This sprig of Michigan oratory exaggerates recklessly as an unchristianized female.—Cotler's Journal.

A society for the prevention of cruelty to animals is needed in Wilmington.

ZEB VANCE.

[From the Atlanta Herald, 2d.] Honorable Z. B. Vance, ex-Governor of North Carolina, lectured at DeWitt's last night to an audience of about four hundred people.

Altogether Mr. Vance's lecture is the best of the season, and pleased every one who heard it. He will make Atlanta another visit next season and will pack DeWitt from pit to dome.

As a lecturer he is no less a success than as a popular speaker. After the lecture Governor Vance, in response to a prolonged applause came on the stage again, and made a neat little speech in the situation, filled with "hits" on political abuses.

THE SUPPER AT PEASE'S.

After the lecture was over, Governor Vance, accompanied by the Lecture Committee and Directors, met a party of friends at Pease's Club Room, where a sumptuous supper was spread. With a huge punch bowl in the centre, champagne at every plate, and Gen. Robert Toombs, with his inimitable cluck, as the head of the table, the occasion was a brilliant one.

For an hour or so, Gen. Robert Toombs, Gen. Colquitt, Col. Alston, Gov. Vance and Mr. Hill, held the company in hilarious entertainment; and then when the champagne bottles were finally opened, Mr. Hillyler toasted "Zeb Vance and the Old North State." The Governor responded in a nobby and humorous manner. Gen. Toombs then being toasted, arose and made one of his telling speeches, in the midst of high applause. Mr. Hill then followed in a handsome and eloquent speech, for which we have no room to-night.

Gen. Colquitt then being toasted in a deserved manner by Mr. E. Y. Clarke, returned thanks, declining (as it was 2 o'clock) to make a speech. It is seldom that four greater men than Zeb Vance, Gen. Toombs, Ben. Hill and Alfred H. Colquitt, ever draw around the festal board.

On reading the above, we were very pleasantly reminded of an incident said to have occurred when the Democratic Convention was in session at New York, in 1858. Governor Vance was among the delegates from North Carolina on that occasion—but as it was his first appearance among our Northern friends since 1839, even his name unknown to the mass of the Unaffiliated there assembled. By general invitation our delegation attended a huge banquet prepared for a portion of the Convention. The hall was commodious but well packed; the hands, rare and promotive of good fellowship; the champagne, seductive and inspiring.

When the company had reached the hilarious stage, toasts and responses became the order of the evening. Many brilliant speeches elicited the warmest praise and caused the hall to resound with joyous festivity. Finally, in a pause, some North Carolina, ambitious for his selection, cried out distinctly for "Zeb Vance," and forthwith "Some Northern" arose to air his bid. But nothing daunted, our Carolinian amended his cry, calling for "Zeb Vance!" and amid much clamor, sprang one Western man answering to the call.

Disappointed but not discouraged, the Governor's friends again amended with "Zeb Vance, North Carolina," and the cry was repeated. In response, the Governor arose and, in a minute of wit on the astonished guests—who were so delighted with his opening, that when he presented his grace and hereupon limped on a side-board where he had broken glasses and overturned dishes, the orator of the evening poured out such a brilliant stream of wit—and wisdom, pleasant anecdote and caustic railery as astonished and charmed the entire assemblage. Never had northern appetite banqueted on such a feast, never had western brains been regaled with such admirable strains. In a moment the W. F. Governor of North Carolina had won the hearts of his former foes, and Vance so lately unknown to him, once the lion of the day.—Ledge's Occasional.

The Judgeship. The contest for Judge, in this the 9th Judicial District, being very animated, and from what we see and hear, we fear it will terminate in a fierce and bitter one among the friends of the several aspirants.

The position of Judge is one of first importance to the country, and in making a selection to fill it, the people, now that they are required to select by ballot, ought to be careful not to be imposed upon by the tricks and wiles of the politician and demagogue. Honesty and capacity are the tests which should be applied to all aspirants for this high position. The Judge sits in judgment upon the just and the unjust, upon the learned and the ignorant, upon the rich and the poor. How important then, that the scales of justice be placed in the hands of those who will hold them equally balanced between the most exalted and the most humble, between friend and foe, and who will carry upon the bench a purity and integrity of character, which will be above suspicion, and a dignity, which will elevate the position entirely above party politics, and no other than such a character is fit to wear the Judicial ermine, and the people are not so blinded, as not to see and become disgusted when they see any one, who aspires to this high position, get down in the dirt and mire of the demagogue, and attempt to blacken the character of an opponent by low flimsy personal abuse, detraction and lying.

We hope to see this judicial contest conducted honestly and fairly among the several aspirants in the District. Let the public services and records of all be matter for discussion, but let personalities, except as connected with the public service and records of men, be ignored by all.—Shelby Banner.

The Augusta Chronicle and Sentinel says: "It is rumored that Gov. Moses, of South Carolina, and four of his staff, have engaged passage on the British brig Zerkla (Capt. Resolutions Adopted by the State Executive Committee of the Democratic Conservative Party.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the people in the West in their want of railroad facilities, and pledge ourselves to use every available means to secure the early completion of their projected lines.

Resolved, That the Republican party having despoiled the State of millions of dollars heretofore appropriated for railroad purposes, is unworthy of public confidence, and that experience justifies the conclusion that if that party should again be entrusted with the administration of our internal improvements, its leaders would again prove recreant to their sacred trust, and would divert the public fund to their private purposes.

Resolved, That a wise policy dictates the adoption of such measures as may be necessary to increase the educational advantages of the children of North Carolina.

Resolved, That we earnestly recommend to the members of the Democratic-Conservative party to discourage independent candidates and all other disorganizers, and that all support be promptly withdrawn from every aspirant for office who shall oppose the regular nominees of our conventions.

Resolved, That we tender to the friends of Free Government, our sincere congratulations at the triumph of the great principles of the Constitution as illustrated by the Democratic successes in the recent State and local elections.
