

THE PUBLIC!

As eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, so is continued vigilance, honest, fair and upright dealing necessary to success in business. Having from the outset (18 years ago), appreciated these facts, and acted upon them, we find ourselves to-day rewarded for the countless anxieties, vexations, and the loss of hours of rest by seeing our long cherished hopes realized, of making Char-

In order to be more explicit, we have the pleasure of informing the mercantile world that we have leased the superb store, adjoining our present, (heretofore occupied by Messrs. Brem, Brown & Co., as their Dry-Goods Store), which we will occupy by first of September next for the retail trade only, and will use our present elegant and commodious store for an exclusive thus giving to the trade a strictly "Whole-sole Establishment," where they can make their selections from a Stock purchased for that trade only, thus avoiding coming in contact with a Retail Stock and Retail Buy ers. The advantages of such a House are 100 obvious to need further comment.

To give the general reader a better coneption of the colossal dimensions of our two Houses we state that we will have up-wards of thirty thousand feet of superficial oor room; or if a lane of ten feet wide were formed of our stores, it would reach onsiderably over half a mile.

At the same time we inform our numerus friends that our Mr. Rintels is now gain North buying our second stock this ason, and owing to the decline in goods, ill again place us in a position to successlly compete with all other houses.

Very respectfully, WITTKOWSKY & RINTELS. Charlotte, N. C., May 1st, 1874.

ROBT. E. McDONALD,

LOCAL DOTS. Hand in your church notices to-day. The streets have dried off, and the dust is succeeding the mud. The local items crept to their holes yesterday, and refused to be found.

To-day is the anniversary of the death of the Christian hero, Stonewall Jackson. Wonderfully few picnics have been heard of in this section this Spring. They say the Judicial Convention at Lin colnton next week will be hot as cremation Yesterday was a real Summerish dayoright and warm. Straw hats and thin clothing were popular. Business men had little to do yesterday but sit about and discuss their neighbors and the candidates for office.

The marshals are requested to meet the afternoon at 31 o'clock at the store of J A Young & Son. Henceforth the office of Capt Fred Nash will be found in that now occupied by Mr Johnson B Jones, lately occupied by Maj C Dowd, near the Court House. This office lacks nothing of being a first lass job office. Any style of work desired we can do, and that at low figures and on short notice. A good many persons in this city had tickets in the Norfolk Lottery, and Virginia papers have been in demand for the past two or three days.

It is to be hoped that our business men will comply with the request of the ladies of the memorial association, and close their places of business this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The travel on the railroad, coming from the South is very heavy now, and many Northerners who have been spending the winter in the South, are daily passing through this city going home. Rev Robert Hett Chapman, D D, will today be installed pastor of the Caldwell Church, in the vicinity of Charlotte. The Revs Dr Miller and Douglass, committee of installation.

The Congressional nominating Convention meets in this city on Wednesday, 20th May. The papers of the district will please make mention of the fact and keep it before the people.

CHARLOTTE N. C. SATURDAY, MAY 9, 1874.

The place where the match had been lighted on a post was plainly to be seen, and there is no doubt left that one of the boys spoken of was the guilty party .-They are known and should be dealt with.

We take pleasure in copying it : We are sorry to learn that Professor G. Richardson of the chair of latin and the modern languages at Davidson College has accepted a call to preside over the same department in the Central University at Richmond, Kentucky. The State can ill afford to lose a man like Mr. Richardson. He is a graduate of the University of Alabama and afterward completed his course by a two years sojourn in Berlin. At the commencement of the late war he was a professor at Oxford, Mississippi, and he volunteered as a private and refused the captaincy or any other position that the men in the company pressed him to accept. He persevered in carrying his gun and at Manassas he was badly wounded and sent to the hospital in Richmond where President Davis visited him and commissioned him in his bunk as a Captain in the Navy. ville .- We understand that the whiskey question is in somewhat of a muddle i Statesville. They voted on Monday as to whether or not they should have liquor in the township. The law provides that those who vote on this question shall vote a ticket written or printed "License" or "No License." The prohibitionists voted "No Ligense," while a number of the wet men voted "No Prohibition." The number of votes cast in favor of having liquor was greater than the number cast against it, but in the strict construction the "No License" men carried the township by a majority of 97 votes, because of the fact that a number of men on the other side voted "No Prohibition," when the law said they must vote "License" if they intended to vote in favor of having liquor. This is the situation of affairs, now, if we are correctly informed by persons just from Statesville. What will be done about the matter we do not know, but expect to hear soon of injunctions, Bush Courts, and all that sort of thing. This election, even if decided in favor of the liquor men, will not change the condinow and will remain as dry as a powder

The Lecture Last Night.—By invitation of Hesperian Lodge of Good Templars, of this city, Major Robert Bingham, of Mebanesville, delivered a public lecture on the subject of temperance, at the Court House last night to a large and appreciative audience. He was introduced by Col E & Osborne, and at once directed his remarks to the subject of temperance and the prohibis & Hall tory laws. It is traditional with temperance lecturers of these commu to illustrate their subject by an appeal to the of replying to all such passions of men, and by endeavoring to excite a fanatical fury against the sellers of ardent spirits. The speaker carefully avoided following in the well beaten track of this perance speakers generally, arguing that the whiskey seller, was not so much at half! as the community, which licensed and allowed it to be done.

He commenced by saying that he would take no untenable position, but would plant himself boldly upon the ground that it was the abuse and not the use of ardent spirits which was the great and growing refuse to sell these same articles to set than the use of any other poison, such as strychnine, wolone opian, Tohloroform, ether, &c., and argued at length that it was a dangerous and deadly poison, proving his position by an alarming array of facts and statistics. In the elaboration of this branch of his subject he took up the ethnology of the human race, and dwelt at length upon the comparison between the Anglo-Saxon, and other races of the human family. He showed conclusively, by argument, as well as statistics that the Angle-Saxon, from the peculiar organization of his physical comptiution could not use elcoholic drinks within the bounds of reason, the spoke of the race as a whole) but that he nearly always carried its use to excess. This was because the Almighty had given this peculiar and fortunate race, a brain developed to the highest state of vigor and excitability. Atcoholic stimulants to him was like applying as surely carry away his reason, as the fire would consume the oxygen of the air. It was the application of the match to the pow der magazine, and would as certainly produce explosion. He argued at length, that it was proper to restrain the individual addicted to the use of whiskey, and that it was no greater stretch on the part of society to do this, then in numbers of other instances. The only absolutely free man was the savage who acknowledged no law, not even that of his Creator. Society, for its own general good had in many cases deprived its individual members of many pristleges, such as the observation of the last of government, as the restrictions which the laws placed upon him, in the use of property and privileges many times inherently his own. With many other nations it was not necessary to prescribe the use of ardent spirits, because they did not make a bad use of it comparatively. With the great Anglo-Saxon race it was different. He, who, from insignificance one thousand years ago, had grown to be one fourth of the population of the habitable globe; whose language had been adopted by one half of the civilized world: whose brain had invented and perfected the steam engine and the magnetic telegraph, by the agency of which space and time have been comparatively annihilated who had made some of the most important and valuable discoveries in medicine; who owned and controlled to-day four-fifths of the machine power of the world - and machine power is civilization-who had so extended his power, as to be placed in the very front rank of civilization, must needs have a curb put in his mouth, when his own appetites need regulation. In other words, he runs a high pressure engine, and when that high pressure is increased, he tecomes no longer qualified to exercise the functions of mind and body intended by his Maker.

This curb could only be applied effectually by educating the community, to frown down the license dealer in ardent spirits. It would not do to denounce the seller who was licensed by society; who paid his mon* ey for certain privileges guaranteed him by law. He was not the guilty man. The source of the evil was with the opinions of society, and society only could regulate it. We took somewhat extensive notes of the address, but the hour at which we must close our columns precludes a farther notice. Suffice it to say the address was able and to the point, and we think advanced the true argument in favor of Temperance reform.
