Wholesale Mart, and ours an exclusive Wholesale House.

In order to be more explicit, we have the pleasure of informing the mercantile world that we have leased the superb store, adjoining our present, (heretofore occupied by Messrs. Brem, Brown & Co., as their Dry-Goods Store), which we will occupy by first of September next for the retail trade only, and will use our present elegant and commodious store for an exclusive

WHOLESALEHOUSE

thus giving to the trade a strictly "Whole-sole Establishment," where they can make their selections from a Stock purchased for that trade only, thus avoiding coming in contact with a Retail Stock and Retail Buy ers. The advantages of such a House are too obvious to need further comment. To give the general reader a better con-ception of the colossal dimensions of our two Houses we state that we will have upwards of thirty thousand feet of superficial floor room; or if a lane of ten feet wide were formed of our stores, it would reach considerably over half a mile.

At the same time we inform our numerous friends that our Mr. Rintels is now again North buying our second stock this season, and owing to the decline in goods, will again place us in a position to success-fully compete with all other houses.

Very respectfully, WITTKOWSKY & RINTELS. Charlotte, N. C., May 1st, 1874.

Arm Broken,-Some time (about three weeks) ago we mentioned the fact that Master Fred Ahrens had his arm broken at the skating rink. It was set by Dr J M Miller, and was getting well. The splinter had been taken off and Sunday, while he was running up the steps, his foot slipped and he fell. He threw out the broken arm and fell on it, breaking it again in the same place where it in ?" These, it may be, are minor faults, was broken before. Leslie Graham insists on inviting her half sister, Norah Desmond, to come over to the South and live with her, being ignorant of the fact that Arthur Tyndale had known Norah in Europe, and had won her love and jilted her. Norah arrives in due time, and her presence, the reviving passion of Arthur Tyndale and the jealousy of Carl Middleton, weave a web which can only be disentan-gled by one of the tragic artifices familiar to readers of novels. Each character is tho-roughly individualized and consistent. Max roughly individualized and consistent. Max Tyndale, the cool and somewhat cynical soldier of the Legion, is as true to life as the impulsive Carl and that yacillating craven, Arthur Tyndale. And Mrs Sanford, chat-tering little fool though she be, is as char-acteristic a piece of human flesh as the noble, generous Norah, who grows into one of the most fascinating and love-compelling personages in the realm of modern fiction. The dialogue is bright and pointed, and it is a pity that Miss Fisher should ever be careless. This sentence, for example, is very slip-shod: "She could not remember when she "had said or (had?) done it." There are occasional slips of another kind. Norah

Desmond protests against such "a badge of vulgarians" as the American practice of ignoring a lady's surname immediately after a presentation to her; but the fastidious young lady who is shocked when a new acquaintance addresses her as "Miss Norah, soon commits a more grievous fault in asking a servant the question: "Has Leslie" (meaning her sister, Miss Graham,) "come

Celestial sun in beauty beam,

And on their graves, radiantly gleam

Tis tributes due our honored dead

Now stark in tranquil sleep,

And tears of sorrow weep.

From yon deep azure sky,

Oh may the turf upon their mounds Be robed with verdure bright,

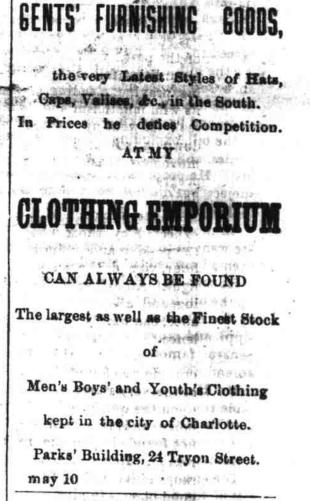

And glory to their names redound In rapturous delight.

Oh may their deeds of valor shine. As stars illume the sky, For sunlight flashing on the Rhyne, Those glories never vie.

Why was I not inspired to sing, Like bards of ancient time, In harmonious lays their deeds I'd sing, In terms of golden rhyme.
