And the fair and pure about His path
In paradise shall bloom.

Unfortunate Love.

Mr. 8, Smith, of Watthratosa, Wis was the principal of an academy, and a man of good education and sup-posed good sense. Until forty years old he remained a hachelor. Then he was romantic enough the encourage him, until her parents talked hem out of the idea. At this Smith cut his throat. The gash was deep and dangerous, but not fatal. It left a long scar and seemed to the Smith of his passion. Agent later he had a relapse. This time it was a young widow, I who humored, teased, and hually jilted him. He promptly got rut his razor again, and slashed at his jugular. The result was a seconed scar, crossing the old one fike the ends of a sawbuck. Another year passed, and a month ago Smith fell in love for the third and last time. It was a teacher in his academy, and she really intended to marry him. The wedding-day was marry him. The wedding-day was Five Prizes $1,000 cach Greenbacks Five Prizes $100 in Carriage and Matches appointed, and nearly reached, when she suddenly changed her mind, because somebody told her of Smith's two previous love affairs. could not marry a man who had loved two women before her, and so eloped with a fellow who was too young to have ever seriously loved anybody. Smith's heart was broken this time past mending. He still owned the razor of bloody memory. His grief was deeper than on the previous occasions, and so was the gash. Smith

Greeting

The one hundred guns of triumph and congratulation that rang out last conveyed to the victorious Conservative forces of North Carolina, now resting on their arms, the greetings of the victorious Conservative army of Petersburg, Nay, more, the voice of Petersburg was the voice of Virginia, as once before the defence of the State was represented by the thin line of ragged aniforins and bright hayonets that circled where the peaceful cordon of peach trees has since marked the culture and the apassage of peaceful days. But no other city, for other good reason, has may better right to speak the voice of Virginia to North Carolina, than has this same pld town of the Cockade. On the fields around it, the Carolinians fought and fell; and here rise yet the heroic billocks which cover their ashes. The twain are one flesh, in respect of many families which have lent common bonor to the annals of the two twin Commonwealths. Lying near the border, and close to the great heart of the State of Raleigh, the city of Petersburg has a peculiar and paramount right to utten at the mouth of her cannon the congratulations of the State of Smith, of the South. The redemption of Raleigh was the logical sequence of the redemption of Petersburg. The knot of undaunted Conservatives here who the confident hope of triumph the forfollowed the star of Hinton to a grand victory, gave information to their brethren throughout the length and breadth of the Union. The weak have been heartened; the indifferent have been kindled into renewed labors and specialties. swift success of the righteous cause. last night a summons to our faithful Carolinian allies of war and peace.
