

CHARLES R. JONES, Proprietor.

Friday, October 18, 1874.

"Free from the dotting scruples that fetter our freedom."

A BASE SLANDER.

Ex-Gov. Parsons, of Alabama, who we believe was one of President Andrew Johnson's Military Governors, for it would certainly be a disgrace to the noble old commonwealth of Alabama, to call him anything else, or to insinuate that by any fair means he had been called to that honorable position by any vote of the decent people of that State, has been elected President of the Chattanooga Convention, and in his address, thanking the carpet-baggers and scallawags then assembled, for the honor conferred upon him by calling him to the chair, to preside over the deliberations to that august body, with characteristic meanness, and pusillanimity, indulges in the following base slander, which we pronounce as infamous an utterance, as he ever could get off. He was properly called to the chair, if he be the arch defamer, of such a body, assembled for such a purpose is entitled to any prominence. But here is the paragraph:

"Where is the Southern chivalry shown in going in disguise and numbers to murder one man? That was not the chivalry the South displayed in the late war, nor in the Mexican war, nor in the war of 1812."

This assertion implies that the "Southern Chivalry" is directly responsible for the diabolical outrages which are alleged to have taken place in the Southern States, particularly since the days of reconstruction.

The "Southern Chivalry," or more properly the Southern people, are not, and never have been responsible for the deeds, of what our Radical brethren have been pleased to term Ku-Klux, and they have been magnified a thousand fold, and we take pleasure in agreeing with Gov. Parsons, when he says deeds of violence, are not one of the characteristics of Southern chivalry.

We hurl back into the teeth of any base slanderer the epithet, either expressed or implied, that we are a set of cowardly cravens who would creep in the dark, to the house of any man, to do him violence. Rather let the deeds of the men under Lee, Johnston and their co-patriots answer for the "chivalry" of the South, and Southern men.

We confess that outrages have occurred, in some parts of the South, but they have been instigated by the devil, and winked at, pushed forward and magnified by carpet-baggers and scallawags, who expected to make political power out of them by riding in plate and emolument.

Outrages are what Southern Radical politicians feed upon, and they are fostered and cherished by all such; and if they can only make it appear that they are committed by the "Southern chivalry" all the better.

The slander bears in its face the lie direct, and the day is coming when the world will believe what we say.

THE STATE FAIR.

We spent Wednesday in attendance upon the State Fair. There were a large number of people present, but in our opinion there were no much more than two thirds of the number as were there last year. The hotels and boarding houses did not appear to be crowded to the extent that they were last fall.

On the whole, the exhibition was a creditable affair, notwithstanding it was not so good as it was one year ago. The exhibition in the Mechanical Department was very good, but we were sorry to note that most of the articles for exhibition were brought from a distance. The cotton press exhibited by Capt. Wilkes, of Charlotte, attracted the full share of attention. Mr. W. C. Morgan, State Agent for the Erie (Pa.) Iron Works, whose headquarters are at the Central Hotel, was on hand with two fine steam engines on exhibition. As he will surely be at the New Fair of the Carolinas, we hope our friends will go and see his beautiful new engines working like a charm.

The indefatigable Secretary of the New Fair of the Carolinas, which commences in Charlotte on the third day of next month, was on the grounds all day, with himself working like a beaver, to induce exhibitors to bring their goods, curiosities, etc., to Charlotte, at that time, and we take pleasure in informing our people that he was successful in numerous instances, and that we may look for a large proportion of the articles and exhibition in Raleigh.

The races were not so good as we have seen, though as a matter of pride we take pleasure in saying that the only race of any importance was won by a ribbon in my hair."

by the little sorrel mare belonging to Messrs. Berry & Walker, of Charlotte. To attempt to give anything like a description of the Fair, in all its details, would take up more space and consume more time than we can afford to spare, and we will content ourselves for the present by saying that while the Fair, in point of numbers, or articles on exhibition, was not what it ought to have been, or what it might have been, judging by the resources at our command, we are still glad that it was a success, and trust that with each year it may grow better and better, until it shall indeed and in truth be a reflex of our real wealth and importance.

Chattanooga Convention as Viewed by a New York Herald Correspondent.

Argus eyed as the Herald truly is, one of its correspondents thus writes up the latest gathering of the faithful, and for the benefit of those who may have any doubt on the subject, we reproduce a portion of his letter:

All Southern outrages are to be dish up and additional material furnished having a tendency to further their political schemes and advance the intrigues that have for so long kept the South under a cloud. To stir up the passions of hate and keep alive the embers of burning strife and promote a diabolical misunderstanding as to the motives and wishes of this section and abuse the minds of Northern people to that extent that any tale to them seems possible, they seize upon the slightest irregularity and exaggerate it and make it appear that the Southern people are antagonistic to every law of order and good government. In my perambulation a speech after information I encountered one of that numerous family without whom no party or body of any kind, degree or purpose was ever yet formed; one who bore the very uncommon name of Jones. Jones is a big man in the party, and to him had been entrusted the gathering up of delegates to the convention. The business of distributing certificates of membership was not a sinecure, and Mr. Jones jogged bravely over the uneven, break-neck sidewalks of the City of Rome, for two whole days, wearing not only his own corporality, but seriously damaging his sole, thus occasioning an urgent demand upon his shoemaker for another pair of moccasins. Mr. Jones poked his nose into every nook and corner, sniffed the breezes and peeped wisely over the top of his silver-rimmed spectacles, manipulated the hands of his friends in the pump-handle shake to discover a Republican likely to accept the great commission and carry out the purposes of the assembled convention. There are numberless prominent Republicans in and about Nashville, yet the glowing representations and earnest appeals of Mr. Jones fell upon listless years and failed to inspire his hearers with a due sense of the importance of the occasion and induce them to take

SELF-APPOINTED PLACES as members of the notable convention. Depressed pocket-books refused to open and yield up the required small sum to conduct a single passenger to Chattanooga and back. With all his zeal in the cause Jones himself did not contemplate being a delegate, and had finally given up his futile attempts to induce persons to become delegates to the convention. The fact of the business is that the native Republicans in Nashville regard the Chattanooga convention with suspicion, and are not willing to risk their reputation in it. They have a tolerable character, but might, if they were to go into this convention, find themselves in the position of Bridget after she went on the boat. Another significant item about the affair is that there is a general manifestation of ignorance as to what the convention proposes to do. The more prominent Republicans alone had received the call, and they had not seen fit to put it before their lesser brethren. It was regarded more in the light of a private paper than a public document. A prominent Republican of Nashville, who is a party manager, though he confessed having the call, did not deem it prudent to let the fact be known. Another had been mainly instrumental in calling the convention, but did not feel it incumbent upon him to express his name in connection with it, leaving Jones to solve the problem of securing delegates to the convention. I next saw and conversed with Abram Smith, a prominent colored Republican, always in the party harness and always ready for a start, who said that he would have nothing whatever to do with the Chattanooga convention. He was not so much enamored of it as to expend a single solitary nickel towards his transportation here. He did not know that the convention would be likely to accomplish anything of which one would feel proud.

At eight o'clock last night I took the Chattanooga train, and soon sped on the way out of Nashville. The Arkansas delegation was aboard on a special sleeping car. They were practically carrying out the idea suggested by the Civil Rights bill, for in sweet and genial companionship with them were a quartette of gentlemen of color who, as will hereafter be shown, are somewhat prominent in Arkansas, as they choose to express it in their own provincial vernacular. With a very few exceptions the delegation is a pack of politicians, men who have grown rich in fat positions under the carpet-bag governments in the South, and who would be both to surrender the emoluments that accrue to them from office, and they are making desperate efforts to hold their own, keep the cards in their own hands, and divide the profits among themselves. The convention had

ITS ORIGIN in the craniums of the Claytons, McCures, Dorcys and Brookes, of Arkansas, while the bold Bakers, of Texas, and others, of this kind, consisting of Radicals and adventurers from that State, make those delegations of more than ordinary interests.

Susan Jane must have been scantly dressed when she was looking out for her lover and sang: "He'll come to-night, the wind's at the east, the moon's at the west, I'll wear the dress that pleased him in the best."

READ, READ, READ. GREAT DISCOVERY. Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint, MADE FROM Pure White Lead, Linseed Oil and Zinc, and Always Ready for Use.

READ THE FOLLOWING TESTIMONIALS: From Prof W G Simmons, Wake Forest College, North Carolina. WAKE FOREST COLLEGE, N. C., October 4, 1873.

Mr C P Knight—Dear Sir: We have for several months been using your Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint on our College Building, and are well pleased with it. Though it was applied by one having no experience in such work, yet we have a good job. We shall continue to use it—believing that in point of economy, durability, and facility of application, it is superior to any other pigment offered in the market. W G SIMMONS.

From Messrs Englehard & Saunders, Editors and Proprietors "Journal." WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 23, 1873. We desire to call special attention to the advertisement of Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint. We can recommend it from a knowledge of the results obtained by the employees of this office having purchased some of this paint from Mr C P Knight, of Baltimore, have used it, and speak in the highest terms of it, after a trial of several months. While it is as durable as ordinary paint, it has a much finer finish, and its cost and convenience will recommend it to all in need of paint.

From S. McCall, M.D. WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 6, 1873. The paint came safe to hand as ordered; 2 kegs, 5 gallons each, and 3 buckets, 1 gallon each. As practice was slack; I did the job myself. Two weeks (not constant) work, completed the house; two coats; the last coat I applied thick, and it is now generally conceded that, for "enamel," like hardness, and body and harmony of colors, there is not a handsomer job in the place. I saved sixty-five dollars by the operation—which is an item just now with the "Southern people." It should be generally adopted in this State. Any country I can apply it. I have never doubted in such cases as "testimonials," but I feel so forcibly the great adaptability of your "Enamel Paint" to the wants of our people—in excellency of material, in beauty of color, and in the fact of its being "ready mixed," that I give you permission (if it is desirable to you) to make what use you think proper of this letter. Very respectfully and truly, S. McCall, M.D.

From R W Rayne, of the Firm of Bartlett & Rayne, 48 Carondelet Street. NEW ORLEANS, January 29, 1874. C P Knight, Esq—No 98, West Lombard Street Baltimore—Dear Sir: It affords me much pleasure to advise you how well satisfied I am with Bradley's Patent Enamel Paint, having used all I bought of you in painting a large cottage (new) at Ocean Springs, Miss., and having found it to cover and work so admirably, and very far superior to ordinary metal paints, and colors not subject to fade, besides being decidedly cheaper. It is my purpose to send you another order for more very soon. Yours respectfully, R W RAYNE.
