CITY BULLETIN.

Work on the new cotton platform progresseth but slowly.

Vance's last: "Tall aches from little toe corns grow."

Weather moderate, with indications of rain.

Not no easy to get up news as you might imagine.

There was a good deal of business of a trival character, before the Magistrates yesterday.

Already several parties from the Northern States have passed through this city on their way to Florida, where they will winter.

The new schedule of the Carolina Central Railroad went into effect yesterday. It now leaves in the morning and arrives in the afternoon.

There were very full congregations at all the churches on Sunday. There were no services in either the Lutheran or Catholic churches.

The Young Men's Christian Association meets this evening at 8 o'clock, at the parlor of Drs. Alexander & Bland, in the Brown building, nearly opposite the Charlotte Hotel.

In another column is an advertisement of a key which has been found and left at this office. It is of the most approved pattern, and looks as if it belongs to some establishment that was worth looking up. If the owner will call and tell us where the store is we won't be so particular about surrendering the key.

No News from Raleigh.

We very much regret that we have no news from Raleigh this morning. We had made arrangements with two of our friends there for special telegrams, and why they were not received we do not understand. The only news we have is in regard to the Chief Clerkship of the Senate.

Personal.

We were honored with a call yesterday evening from Judge David Schenck, who arrived at the Central Hotel yesterday afternoon. The Judge is looking quite well, and wears his bldshing honors becomingly There is not an abler Judge in the State on the Superior Court bench, than he.

New Depot.

The Carolina Central Railway Company has purchased the grounds upon which the Mecklenburg Iron Works now stand, and will erect a depot there. The location is a good one—far preferable to the present. We would be glad to see the work done at once

An Ohio Printer in Charlotte.

Mr. Wm. B. Greene, a graduate of the Register Office, left on Tuesday last, to take charge of an office in Charlotte, North Carolina. He is a competent, worthy young man, and we hope he may find his new home a pleasant and profitable one.

The above is from the Marrietta (O.) Register, of November 12th. Mr. Greene is the foreman of the OBSERVER newspaper and job offices.

The Recent Tragedy in Rowan County.

We print elsewhere in our columns this morning, a letter, giving the particulars of the killing of an unknown negro in Rowan county last Thursday night, by Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Setzer. We were told yesterday morning that Mr. Setzer had died from the wounds which he received during the terrible encounter.

The Carolina Central.

The track of this road has been laid three miles out from Monroe, in this direction, and three miles out from Charlotte, in the direction of Monroe, leaving a gap of 20 miles in the road. The Wilmington Fair has been postponed until the 15th of December, in the hope that this road will be completed by that time, and that many visitors may attend from this section of the State.

Still Confined to Bed.

Mr. Jas. Cassidy, a carpenter of this city, is still confined to his bed by an accident which he received in the new building opposite the Court House, one evening last week. He was walking on the "sleepers," when he made a misstep and fell through into the basement. It is feared that he sustained some injury to the spinal column. At any rate, he is helpless now, and has been since the mishap.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met last night at their hall over the market, in regular monthly meeting. There was no business of especial importance before the meeting. One of the transactions was the appointing of a committee to confer with a committee of Tryon Street Methodist Church, in regard to the purchase of a new bell for the church and for the city clock. Another was instructing the city engineer to lay pipe streets in certain localities under the direction of the street committee. Several other matters of minor importance were acted upon, and the full proceedings will be published to-morrow.

Accident to a Physician.

Dr. J. P. McCombs, of this city, sustained an accident on Saturday night last. He was riding across a small bridge in the road, not far from the city, when the breaking of a plank caused his horse to become frightened and to run away. Dr. McCombs stuck to the saddle until the girth broke, when he and the saddle both went to the ground. He held on to the reins, and was dragged a considerable distance. The fall broke his left collar bone, and he was bruised and otherwise hurt, though not seriously. He is able now to be up and on the streets.

Mayor's Court.

J. F. Davidson and Thos. Harkey were up for an affray on the streets on Saturday evening last. Harkey was fined $12.50, and Davidson was discharged from custody.

Esther Heartt, a young colored girl, was indicted for stealing some rings, a breast pin and some articles of clothing from Mrs. John Springs. She was bound over for her appearance at Court. Some of the stolen property was recovered.

Thos. Woodjack, colored, was in for stealing clothes from Ike Peters, also colored. As the stealing was proved jam up on him, and as he could not give ball for his appearance at Court, he was lodged in jail.

J

A Well Merited Compliment.

We are highly gratified to learn, as we do by a private telegram received in this city yesterday, that Johnstone Jones, Esq., late a citizen of Charlotte and late editor of the OBSERVER, has been elected, by a unanimous Conservative vote, as Principal Clerk of the Senate. The office could have been bestowed upon no one more worthy than he. He will make an entirely efficient Clerk, and the work which he has done for the party eminently entitles him to some consideration at its hands. He has been a steady and able champion of the cause of Conservatism, and an equally steady and able foe of Radicalism, Merrimonism, and every other ism, which came in conflict with the interests of the people and of good government. The OBSERVER's editorial staff extends to Mr. Jones, its hearty congratulations.

Delinquent Subscribers.

We have a good many subscribers who are due us money on subscription. The following, which is from an exchange, suits our case exactly:

"Looking over an old ledger, we see a long array of names of former subscribers who are indebted to us. Some of them have moved away and are lost to sight, although to memory dear. Others are carrying the contribution boxes in our most respectable churches, and others again have died and are angels in heaven, but they owe us just the same."

Right here we would say, that on the 1st of January, the new postage law goes into effect, and after that time, we will have to prepay postage on all the papers which are sent out of the county. As we cannot afford to do this unless the subscription price is paid, we shall, at the time named, erase from our list, the name of every subscriber whose subscription has not been paid in advance.

Our Fair.

What shall be done about the Fair? Horse racing and agriculture don't mix well; they never did and never will, and nearly every effort that has ever been made to make them mix, has been a failure. Now, nobody is a better friend to the Fair here than we, but now when it is all over, we are bound to think that it was not the exhibition it should have been, and we have serious doubts about whether it will make two pumpkins grow where one grew before. The farmers of Mecklenburg and the surrounding counties, do not take any interest in it, nor will they so long as it is managed by "town folks." The Fair, we believe, will have either to be abandoned or turned over to the Grangers. They can make it a successful agricultural show, but so long as they continue their opposition to it, just so long will it be but an apology for one, and a very poor apology at that.

But it seems to us that we have had enough of Fairs. We are in favor of a Jockey Club instead. Let the present track be converted into a mile course, and lop off the agricultural feature altogether. These Fairs, managed as they are in North Carolina, do precious little good, and nine out of every ten persons who go to them, go to see the races. The principal turfmen of the country are anxious that this Fair be converted, as we have said, into a jocky club. We talked with nearly all of those who were here at the recent Fair, and received from them the assurance that if this idea is carried out, and Spring and Fall races are held here, that they will be participated in by many of the most famous horses in the United States. These will strike Charlotte between the New Orleans and Baltimore and New York races, and nearly all the horse men who attend these races, will stop here if any sort of inducement is held out to them.

The people who would attend these races are of a class who would bring and spend money here. That more money would be left here by those who would attend these races than by those who would attend a Fair, there is no sort of doubt. But aside from all these considerations, there is more money in a jockey club to the members of the Fair Association, than in an agricultural exhibition, and this is the leading object after all.

We are aware of the fact that it is a private enterprise, and we hope not to be charged with meddling in what doesn't concern us, when we give expression to views these. It is a matter in which we and the community generally are greatly interested, and we make these suggestions knowing that we give publicity to an opinion which is entertained by a majority of those who have thought any at all about the matter.

If it should be thought advisable, an annual Fair could be held, also, every Fall, at which time we could make a display of our agricultural products, machinery, etc., and when persons could visit the grounds without the fear of being thrown with gamblers and sharpers, and avoid also the horse racing, if they so desired.

Westminster Review.

The reprint of the Westminster Review for October has just been published by THE LEONARD SCOTT PUBLISHING CO., 41 Barclay Street, New York. Our space will allow us to do little more than mention the articles which make the present number unusually interesting.

I. "The Revolt of the Residuum." An exposition of the causes of the fall of the Gladstone Administration, a result brought about by the temporary disaffection of a large class of liberal voters.

II. "The Character of Achilles." A portrait of the typical Greek hero, who, "more than any character of fiction, represents the qualities of the Greek race in its heroic age."

Art. III. reviews Prof. Cairnes' recent work on some leading "Principles of Political Economy." The reviewer mainly confines himself to a discussion of the theory of wages, the subject of value, and international trade.

Art. IV. is devoted to recent Theories on the Origin and Development of Language. The reviewer contends that the faculty of language is not a special endowment abruptly bestowed, but is the result of gradual development; he claims it as "congenital to man—born with him; but it is only congenital as a beard and moustache are congenital."

V. "Charles and Mary Lamb." The imperfections of all editions of their works are pointed out, Mary Lamb's memory having hitherto suffered great neglect.

Art. VI. exhibits a very defective system of administration with respect to Indian Public Works.

Art. VII. takes up Dr. Clarke's recent work on "Sex in Education," and impeaches the accuracy of his conclusions. The statistics here produced go far to prove that whatever be the nature and extent of the physical deterioration of American women, that deterioration is not due to the present system of educating girls. The reviewer considers, also, some of the causes which, singly or combined, modify the hygienic state of American women.

VIII. "The Best Food for Man." An argument for a fruit and farinaceous diet.

Besides the above, a large number of short notices of recently published works will be found under Contemporary Literature.

Our readers will do well to provide themselves for the coming year with one or all of the periodicals reprinted by THE LEONARD SCOTT PUBLISHING CO. They are as follows: The London Quarterly, Edinburgh, Westminster, and British Quarterly Reviews, and Blackwood's Magazine. Price, $4 a year for any one, or only $15 for all.

[COMMUNICATED.]

An Attempt at Robbery that Didn't Pay —Heroism of a Woman.

On the night of the 12th inst., a most horrible crime was attempted in the western part of Rowan county.

The circumstances, as I heard them on the spot from Mr. and Mrs. Setzer, are substantially as follows: Two negro men unknown to their would-be victims, went to the house of Mr. Caleb Setzer, a worthy and esteemed citizen of our neighborhood, who lives at the crossing of the Salisbury, Sherrill's Foard, Concord and Neely's Mill roads, about (11) eleven mills from Salisbury. The time of their approach was between the hours of 10 and 11 o'clock P. M., after the family, which consists only of Mr. Setzer and his wife, had retired. They knocked at the door, giving their names as Jim Jordan and Frank Johnson, respectively, and asked admittance into the house ostensibly for the purpose of procuring fire to "strike camp," pretending to be wagoners. The negro Jordan entered the house with an impudent, swaggering air, got his fire and retired, Mr. S. following him to the door. He then joined his companion, who had remained outside, walked off some distance with him, threw down his fire and held a consultation.

In a few moments they returned to the house, and Jordan again entered this time on the pretext of wanting water. He stalked up to the hearth where Mr. S. was sitting, and asked if he (Setzer) had any money to lend him. Upon being answered in the negative, he drew his pistol, cocked it, and presented it to the breast of Mr. S. Mrs. S. being yet in bed, and hearing the clicking of the pistol, rushed to the spot, and, with more than woman's courage, seized it just as it fired, causing the ball to pass between them and lodge in the bed. Mr. S. then closed with his antagonist, grasping him by the throat, whilst his wife held on, with desperate and heroic firmness, to the pistol. The negro was finally forced to release his hold on the pistol, when Mrs. S. wrenched it from his hand, and aimed it at his breast. Unfortunately it failed to discharge and so their struggles were prolonged. Seeing she could not discharge it, she dealt him a blow in the temple with the hilt of the pistol, shivering it in pieces. This together with the efforts of her husband felled him to the floor. Whilst Mr. S. pinioned the negro to the floor, our heroine, with unparalleled presence of mind, closed the door and locked it, to bar the other villian out; who it seems was afraid to enter and would not do so, tho' implored by his comrade to come to his rescue.

Mrs. S. then seized a rock, which served as an andiron, from the glowing fire, and pummelled him on the head right industriously for awhile; finding at length the rock too hot for her hand, this Joan of Arc enveloped it in a certain article of her wearing apparel, (which shall be nameless) and again tried her strength on his cranium.

At length, supposing the would-be assassin dead, she left him prostrate on the floor, and Mr. S., who is in feeble health, setting exhausted in a chair, and ran up stairs to a window to alarm the neighborhood. She soon heard a noise down stairs, hastened down and reached the room as the negro was rising to his feet, knife in hand; the negro now made a second assault on Mr. S., who in some way parred the knife aimed at his throat, but received it in his cheek, inflicting a ghastly wound. By this time Mrs. S. had gotten a farmer's spade, used in the house as a shovel, and with a well-directed blow brought the murderous thief again to the floor, this time with his skull crushed in the occipital region.

The negro being now hors de combat, his female antagonist continued to club him with the spade, until there was not a vestige of life remaining. In her own words "I killed him every time he moved."

In this terrible melee Mr. Setzer received some frightful gashes about the face and hands; Mrs. S. one severe cut on the arm, besides having the entire palmer surface of her hand blistered by the hot rock. Drs. Luckey and Eaton were called in to dress the wounds; they pronounced them not dangerous.

A coroner's inquest was held late in the evening of the 13th, up to which time the negro had not been certainly recognized. The jury returned a verdict of "Justifiable Homicide."

I would say in this connection that the place of the rencounter is only three quarters of a mile from the bridge where McFee was found murdered a few weeks since. Whether this is the same party that killed McFee is not known, the suspicions are somewhat in that direction, as some of the neighborhood think they have seen the negro in the neighborhood before.

In conclusion, let me say that the whole country is ringing with encomiums upon the heroic conduct of Mrs. S., and with joy at the happy issue of the attempted assination and robbery.

And thus may Nemises ever requite like attempts with like result and bloody retribution. May this be an example in terrorem to others of his stripe, and let the courage of Mrs. S. be a thing for emulation, as it certainly will be for pride, by the rest of her sex.

Shooting Scrape.

A difficulty took place on Sunday morning on Graham street, next door to the colored Methodist Church, between a negro named Elam Hendesron and his step-son, a boy about 16 years old, named Jim Caldwell, which terminated in the shooting of the former. It appears that two weeks ago or such a matter, Henderson borrowed $5 from the boy, who had dunned him for it several times, and made him mad. Sunday morning, Henderson was drunk, when the boy entered the house and soon the subject was introduced, and led to a quarrel, as it had done on previous occasions. After a while Henderson said to the boy, "I will shoot you," and at the same time got down a gun. "Shoot ahead," said the boy; and just as the step-father was bending over, cocking the musket, the other produced a pistol and fired upon him, at a distance of about ten feet.

The ball buried itself in the anterior part of the man's abdomen and entering the muscular part, rebounded and dropped out. Henderson, after being shot, followed the boy into the yard, and pursued him until his (Henderson's) wife, the boy's mother, caught him and wrenched the gun from his hands. Dr. T. J. Moore was called to see the wounded man. He administered the necessary surgical relief, and yesterday, the condition of the man was quite satisfactory. Had the ball penetrated but a little distance further, the wound would almost certainly have proved fatal.
