Singular Remedy for a Hurt.

We are told of the following which is said to be an infallible remedy for a wound or simply to smoke the wound or bruise that is inflamed with burning wool or woolen cloth twenty minutes. The smoke of wool will take the pain out of the wound. Repeat once or twice. It is said that this will allay the worst case of inflammation arising from a wound.

Wented One that Hadn't Been Read. When a darkey does get fustidious he can be more fastidious than a dozen white men. The other day one came in this office and wanted to buy a paper. The mailing clerk handed him one which had been unfolded and tossed over on the table. No, he didn't wan't that one; he wanted "one that hadn't been read," and he wouldn't be satisfled until another one was hunted up.

This thing seems to be regarded as something fabulous and unheard of, the principle being its ability to keep in motion with a very small quantity of water. We have looked around us often enough not to recognize anything very astonishing in this. A machine ought to be expected to want less water than a man, and we know of men who have gone for weeks and even months without the use of water except to wash their faces: Thus do we expose another pious fraud, and bring into disgrace this Mr Keeley, who, with his blandishments, has been for months gulling a gullible world.

The Orphans To-Night.

We beg to again remind our people of the entertainment to be given to-night by the nine children from the Oxford Orphan Asylum. The entertainment will take place at the Court House, beginning at 7.30, and will be free to all. Mr Mills, the Superintendent of the Asylum writes us: "Twice rain has met us in Charlotte. I wish to try once more to get the orphan work before the people of the place." We sincerely trust that he will not fail to do so this time, either from inclement weather or lack of a crowd. We would be glad to see the Court House filled this evening.

Rickert, an old and much esteemed citizen of Iredell county, died a few days since at his residence about two miles from Statesville, of sunstroke, or something similar to it. "Uncle Andy Rickert" was a character well known to every one who eyer abode in Statesyille for any length of time, and his cordiality, good-humor, and never-failing store of conversation, were qualities which will make him remembered long after all that was mortal of him, shall have again turned Numerous have been the plans suggested and remedies applied to assist poor exhausted humanity to enjoy nature's repose without being tormented by these detestable bloodsuckers, But in most instances the remedy applied has proven nearly, if not quite as vexatious as the depredations of these tormenters. The following we clip from the New York Sun as a sure and pleasant way to circumvent the letting of blood by these enemies of the human race: "Savages in hot climates cover their bodies with oil, in order to avoid the attack of venomous insects. The mosquito is a blood-thirsty wretch, but he will not touch grease. On retiring at night, rub the exposed portions of the face and hands with scented eil or pomade, and although you may hear the mosquitoes screaming all around they will not touch you, and you calm. ly subside into sleep inhaling the fragrance of flowers."

Usually when one falls the other stands in its stead. But both failed yesterday, and we could neither trimp nor follow suit. This singular failure of this valuable quality, is "a dark and bloody mystery," but certain it is that "from some cause or causes to the jury unknown," our creative pow ers are at present lacking, and we must "pause till they come back to us." He has long since whittled up all the mantel-pieces and window sills in this office; he has finished his own chair, and before he left had inched around to our side of the table and taken i couple of rounds of ours. So great is his penchant for whittling that when he leaves town we always carry a goods box down to the train and put it in the car with him, otherwise the railroad companies charge him extra for damage to rolling stock. This penchant together with his proverbial absentmindedness, got him into a scrape one time before he got married. He went calling, and before he left, asked the young lady to play for him. She did so, and he stood by the piano, his thoughts wandering to the nttermost ends of the earth.
