Something in a Name.

A few nights ago, a robber judging from the name, that Thomas Jefferson a barber in the Charlotte Hotel bui ding, had a house full of rich plunder, attempted to enter it. Jefferson on hearing the noise advanced with a pistol in each hand and pulled down-not on the robber, but on himself, and inflicted a wound with the pistol shot that had nearly been a serious one.

Colored Odd Fellows' Festival.

The colored Odd Fellows' Festival last night was, in the stereotyped language of the day, "a very recherche affair." The colored band furnished music for the occasion, an example which white musicians of this city might, with propriety, fellow as regards church festivals.

A candidate for a vacant vicarage in England announces an invention of his own which may prove to be useful. It is a pecutiar arrangement of the pulpit, with a clock to give warning When at the end of the half hour the clock sounds an alarm, if the preacher does not conclude within three minutes, down comes the pulpit, with the parson and the rest of the appendages. -Ez. Won't some enterprising Englishman introduce the above invention in America. It would immortalize any one to do so, and coming generations would call him a public benefactor and a considerate gentleman.

The Unveiling of the Statue of Stenewall Jackson-An Immense Crowd and Great Enthusiasm -Outline of the Proceedings.

RICHMOND, VA. Oct. 26th, 1875. DEAR OBSERVER: The oldest inhabitants agree that Richmond never saw such a day as this has been; such a crowd and such amount of magnificence The city was prepared for a large crowd and a fine demonstration, but for nothing like witnessed to-day. I never bore witness to such an occasion, and have grave doubts whether I shall ever do so again. From early till late the streets have been a perfect jam, and it was with great difficulty that the long precession could make its way. At an eary hour strains of martial music greeted the ear, and the streets were alive with military while the sidewalks were thronged with strangers and citizens, from which to view the procession. From nearly every house on the line of march, floated banners, and the fronts A pole about the height of twelve feet with of many of the business houses and residences were handsomely decorated with flowers and evergreens, while portraits and other styles of pictures of the immortal hero whose memory was being honored, hung over doors and from windows.

> The procession was formed on Broad street, right resting on Foushee street, facing. First in order was Chief Marshal Gen Joseph E Johnston and staff, preceded by a squad of mounted police; there were fifteen or twenty companies in all, and the display is said to have been firmer than was ever seen here before; after the military came the Governor of Virginia and staff, guests of the Commonwealth (among these Mrs Jackson in a carriage), orator of the day and officiating clergy, &c., &c., ad infinitum, to such length as that I cannot enumerate. The length of the procession was three or four miles. All of the organizations of all kinds, in the city participated, dressed in their regalias, and the display was dazzling beyond description. After it had finally been formed, the procession moved down Broad street to Nineteenth, through this to Main, up Main to and around Monroe Park to Franklin, down Franklin to Fifth, Col E A Osb rne has concluded to take up through Fifth to Grace, down Grace to the legal profession again, and has formed a | the Capitol square, entering the Square through the West gate, fronting Grace street. At the intersection of Main and Fifth the procession passed under an arch, decorated with flags, flowers and evergreens, and bearing on it inscrip tions laudatory of the christian warrior. and carries upon his shoulders a sound and | On Grace street, just before entering Capitol Square, there was another of these arches, and on either side of it sat two war-worn veterans, with their tattered Confederate gray clothes, their slouched hats, canteens and muskets. As the column reached there, Gen Jo. Johnston uncovered his head, in silent reverence, and shout after shout rent the air. The scene was highly impres-

The Capitol Grounds were packed with people; you have heard the ex pression, "a sea of upturned faces;" the quotation exactly represents the idea I mean to convey, as to the magnitude of the gathering, and in addition to these on the grounds, the trees, balcomes and house tops in all directions within sight, were filled. So great was the press that thousands were unable to get within ear-shot of the speakers, and numbers were unable to catch even a glimpse of them. After the arrival of the procession, Gen Page called the vast assemblage to order, and an eloquent prayer was offered by Bishop Doggett. Gov Kemper then took the stand, amid great applause, and welcomed the numerous visitors, in the name of Virginia : it was the greatest crowd he had ever seen gathered at the capital of the Old Dominion, and all had come to honor a great chieftain, a knowledge of whose glory had extended all over the nation. The Governor spoke in glowing language of the undaunted courage, the genius and the daring of the christain soldier, and concluded his stiring remarks by introducing that eminent divine, the intimate friend of Stonewall Jackson, the Rev Moses D Hoge.

When order had been restored, Dr Hoge proceeded with his oration. It was a masterly effort, and enchained the audience from the beginning to the end. The address of the reverened gentleman was frequently interrupted marks he mentioned the name of Gen Joseph E Johnston, and no sooner had he done so than shout after shout was given for the noble old commander. He arose and bowed his head graceafter cheer went up. Dr Hoge's address was a truthful yet powerful eulogy upon the subject of his oration, and as he dwelt upon the courage, the endurance, the piety and the sterling worth of the great Jackson, every one within the sound of his voice hung almost breathlessly upon his burning many of the members of the old Stone commander that they had just led a successful charge, Jackson said: "All right; the day will come when all will be proud that they were members of that brigade." The orator continued "That day has come. Look (pointing toward the statue) upon your commander!" At that moment the canvass fell from t, and Foley's great work of art stood uncovered before the assemblage. Then the welkin rang, and the greatest commation prevailed. Once and again enthusiastic cheers went up from thusands of throats, and these were only quieted by the booming of cannon and the rattle of musketry. The Generals and State dignitaries who occupied the stand, then formed in line, each bearing wreaths and bouquets, which they placed upon the base of the statue. In a short time Gen Johnston appeared at Charlotte, as far above the average the edge of platform, and lifting Miss theatrical companies, and as first class Julia Jackson upon the banister, pre- in all respects. They are well suported sented her to the crowd. Then there and can only afford to play for one was the wildest enthusiasm, and as the night. We hope they will have a full all eagerly seeking for eligible positions little girl stood modestly upon the rail- house on their first appearance which ing, supported by the gallant old warrior, the shouts could have been heard

During the exercises Mrs Jackson sat in a carriage by the stand, and as soon as the ceremonies were concluded. hosts of people gathered around and shook hands with the widow and daughter of Stonewall Jackson. There were men who had fought under Jackson. and who warmly grasped the hands of his wife and child, for the sake of the love they bore their commander.

The statue of Jackson as is well known, is of bronze, and was presented to the State of Virginia by Hon Beresford Hope, Member of Parliament for the University of Cambridge, England, hose who knew Jackson well, to be a following is the inscription upon the

monwealth. "Look! there is Jackson standing ike a Stonewall." The city was illuminated to-night in the most gorgeous and beautiful manner, and there was a magnificent display of fireworks in the Capitol Grounds in the early part of the evening, but this was interfered with by the rain. The Fair began to-day, and as yet there is but a slight diminution in the number of visitors in the city. Yours, &c.,

The Methodist Festival on Wednesday

When we went into the basement of the church where the Fes ival was held, we felt like a child in a toy shop and could not teli what we really wanted; for there were dainties on every side to tempt the most fastidious appetite. The room was gorgeously decorated and festooned with wreaths of evergreens; a number of Chinese lanterns with gaudy lights bearing the appropriate inscription of "Union fereyer" on each one, added much to the brilliancy and festivity of the scene, Loving couples promenaded drank-lemonade-others eagerly sought for the post office; the oyster saloon, the art gallery; the fortune teller, and the number of other cosy and attractive 1.00ks that excited the interest and curiosity at every turn. All the while too, the children of the Sunday School discoursed the sweetest anthems. When we left, the roam was well filled and the guests too, before they left, Everything was conducted with the utmost decorum and propriety. The ladies at the stalls and counters who served out choice bouquets and savory viands, were polite to customers, though they pressed no one that we saw, to buy; hence every one felt at his ease. The managers of the affair have cause to congratulate themselves upon the success of their de ign. Their affable pastor, Mr Carraway, with his lady, was moving about in the throng and seemed highly delighted as he glanced over not ony his own congregation, but members of others present, Net receipts, $220.

The Origin of the Pin-Back Dress, A foreign exchange gives it in this way :

"Mrs O'Flaunigan was an Irish lady, with imited means and a good constitution. She therefore, like a sensible woman, used the latter to preserve the former by taking in washing, and soon became noted as a purifier of soiled linen. Mrs Judy was a w.dow, having buried her "dear Mike" a few days Oyster Crackers!! Corner Trade street and N. C. & C. having buried her "dear Mike" a few days after his return from a country fair with his head broken in several places. "Small loss," by bursts of applause, the fiery elo- said the widow to herself; yet she waked quence of the speaker communicating him in a manner worthy of the O Flannito the listeners. Once during his re- gans in olden times. Now Judy lived in that "modern Babylon" called London, and it chanced one day that Mme. LaMode a noted French modiste, while visiting "perfide Albion," required the services of one of her craft, and, being recommended to Judy, called, and found her busy over her tube, fully, while hats were doffed and cheer her ample skirt well pinned back, and her person resembling a huge clothespin with a sheet tied around it. Madame was charmet; to her it seemed a novel sight, as they do things differently in la belle France, There the washerwomen are not troubled with long skirts, besides, they generally use the river tor a wyshtub. She immediately felt inspired with the birth of a new fashion and, on her return to Paris, produced the words. Toward the conclusion he ex- dress called the "Blanchisseuse," which, pressed pleasure at seeing present so meaning simply washerwoman, did not suit on this side of the water, and the one now wall Brigade, and related that on one in use was adopted in its stead.

Extends to the Country-The Zebra Stockings,

On yesterday there was a buggy from the country, standing in front of a certain dry goods store, and as the young man assisted the young lady into the buggy, we noticed she wore striped stockings.

Joy and Smiles.

The tank officers have, ever since the decision in favor of the National banks, had their faces wreathed in one long, uninterrupted smile of joy and gladness They say Bank stock is risin at the rate of two-forty a minute. See comments on the decision in the editorial column.

Sheridan & Mack Opera Troupe.

We have seen quite a number of the most favorable notices of the play called "The Mimiques;" and from all accounts, we can recommend the Sheridan & Mack Troupe to the people of will be at the Charlotte opera house on next Wednesday, Nov 3rd.

Read what the Cleveland (Ohio)

News says about them: "It is not Sheridan and Mack alone who deserve commendation but the whole rank and file of the company. Miss Belle Howitt, Miss Rosa Leigh Miss Alecia Jourdan, and Messrs Kelly Bray and Turner are all worth hearing and seeing. The engagement closes to-morrow night, and no one should miss the chance of seeing them.

That Sitting Hen Business.

It has been suggested that the new appointees, named in a squib, in yes. terday's OBSERVER, in reference to the Western North Carolina Railroad, may misunderstand our intent and consider and labor is saved. The price of the Dixie and by other English gentlemen. It is that gallinacious figure was a fling at Pump is in the reach of all. It is manufaca splendid work of art, and is said by them. This was certainly not our purpose in using that illustration, since remarkably fine representation. The we number all four of the appointees among our friends, but it was simply an effort to raise a grin at the expense of the Commissioners for their silly and unaccountable reticence as to what they have done or propose to do. Of course they put their best foot foremost or, to carry out the figure, the game hen eggs have been hatched first (which shows they are good eggs), while the goose eggs, if there are any, requiring more time for incubation will be hatched last. It should not surprise us if Gov Brogden's pet hen should hatch herself and triplets at that. Stranger things have happened.
