The Weather.

Yesterday was clear as could be. Not a cloud was visible. The air was crisp and cold, and it was in all respects a representative winter day. Toward evening the coolness increased, and the wind swept along the streets and around the corners with biting breath. At midnight, however, the temperature was more moderate and the skies were covered with clouds; so that we fear the clear spell will be but short lived, though Old Probs. assures us that we will have a continuance of it for to-day, at least.

There was a slim crowd out last night, to to any lack of merit on the part of the troupe, for it is certainly very excellent. They furnish a fine illustration of how much human skill can accomplish. Their jugglery and balancing are very fine, and the cope walking of little Que received well merited applause, It is a very wonderful and interesting performance, and cannot fail to please.

Charlotte as Freated by the Bailroads. The following is a matter of which we have talked on several occasions, and we entirely endorse all that is said in this extract, which is from the Democrat, of yesterday:

"We venture to say there is no place in the United States the size of Charlotte (or any other place of any size) with the same number of railroads running into it, that has so few local railroad accommodations or conveniences. There is no shed at any one of the several depots to protect men, women or children from the storms of winter or the sun of sun mer, and schedules are made out and put in operation without the slightest regard to the business interest of the city or the convenience of her citizens, although the city and county have nearly a half million dollars invested in the railroads."

Swinging on the Gate

Would have been nice last night had it not been so co'd. A fellow might have the female from freezing. Thus do atmospheric influences get away with our most tender emotions.

Profanity.

We call attention of the police to the obscene and prefane language indulged in by the negroes who congregate every night on both sides of Trade street, near the Market House. It is not only highly disgusting to gentlemen, but extremely shocking to refined ladies, who cannot avoid hearing the filthy and blasphemous expressions when walking the streets. There is a penalty against such boisterous conduct, and such law less characters should be forced to respect public opinion or retire from the public thoroughfares, at least to indulge their deprayed tastes.

with growing towns.

Contrary to all expectations, Sunday was a bright and beautiful day. The sunshine was gratefully received, and the population of her sister, although she is already married of the city, which had been for so long to Marasquin, intending to substitute Girofla weather-round, turned out almost en masse, if not to church to walk and stand around upon the stree s, and thus exercise that freedom from which they had been debarred during most of the preceding week. The day was very cool, and the bracing atmosphere made one's spirits buoyant and caused pulses to tingle and cheeks to redden with the glow of health.

character of many days which immediately way to the Seraglio of Constantinople were large congregations at the different churches. Three of these, however, were not open for services: The Lutheran Church is still without a pastor; the pastor of Tryon Street M E Church, has not yet returned from his visit to the East, and the new pastor of the Second Methodist Church has not yet reported for duty. In all the other churches, services were held by the pastor of

In addition to the church services, there were two Mormon missionaries in the city, and one of these, Mr Teasdale, preached in the morning and afternoon at the Court House, to tolerably fair congregations, constituted altogether of males, who were led thither by curiosity. The preacher said that he was not regularly ordained to proclaim the gospel of the Latter Day Saints: but in his country, men were called from their plows, their stores, counting houses, or any other vocation, and sent out on mission tours. Such was his situation. In explanation of Mormonism, he said it was the revealed will of God, the Gospel as preached by Christ and his apostles, or it is nothing. The Mormons accept the Bible as the rule of their lives; they accept the history of the Jews, the writings of the four evangelists-Matthew, Mark Luke and John-and the letters of the apostles. They believe in baptism by immersion and the remission of sins by the laying on of hands. They believe in witness the performance of the Royal Yeddo | a personal God, with body, parts and pas-Japanese Troupe. This cannot be charged sions, in His Son who was made in His image, and that He was offered up as a sacri fice for the sins of men. The preacher went into a long argument, in which we are not able to follow him, to prove that the Mormon faith is the true religion, backing his assertions by copious quotations from the scriptures, and pronouncing against those who hold other creeds as being on the downward road.

The speaker defended polygamy quite vigorously, and compared the virtue of his people with the licentiousness which prevailes among the people of other parts of the United States. He believed that a man should have as many wives as he could support; said the Mormons did support their wives and families: they were wives and not simply women. He spoke of the great morality which existed among the people of Utah, and talked of their great prosperity and how they had been blessed by God for the sake of their religion. too much space to these "sermons,"

Mr Calhoun, her manager and advance agent, called upon us yesterday, and from him we learn that Miss Putnam has a very fine company with her, among whom are some of the best character actors of the country. In some specialties Miss Putnam has no superiors on the stage. She is the only "Little Nell" and "Marchioness" now on the boards, and her "Fanchon" is equal. if not superior to any other we have ever

The Holman Opera Troupe,

Mr Ernest Stanley, the advance agent of the Holman Opera Troupe, arrived in this city yesterday morning, and covered the bill boards. The troupe appears here on Monday evening next, and will present the charming opera "Girofle-Girofla." The Holmans have been playing in the South with great success for the past eight weeks, and we have every confidence that the company is a strong one. We have seen the opera which they will present here, an outline of it will interest our readers :

Don Bolero d'Alcaragas, a Grandee o Spain, and his wife Aurore, have two children, twin daughters, Girofle and Girofla, who are so remarkably alike, that the only means of distinguishing them is by their clothes. One wears blue and the other pink. Don Bolero, when the piece opens, is in great trouble and danger from two quarters: he owes four millions of francs to a banking house, Marasquin et Cie., and is threatened with proceedings for its recovery; while he is also in dread of an invasion of his territory by a fierce neighbor of his, a Moor, Mourzouk. Aurore has contrived to appease these two enemies by sending them the portraits of her daughters, and arranging a double marriage-Marasquin to marry Girofle, and Mourzouk Girofla. The piece opens on the wedding day. Marasquin ar- sions. Bolero, from motives of economy, with not give two breakfasts, and wishes both the weddings to be on the same day. But Marasquin insists on being married at once. All is arranged, when Girofia is carried off by a redoubtable band of Pirates.

Bolero sends a celebrated Admiral, Matamoros, in pursuit of the Pirates, and he undertakes to restore him his daughter by the is now only $11,322 23 per mile. New cars evening. This road will altries to put him off, but Mourzouk, in a most threatening manner, insists on her beline from Charlotte to Augusta is dotted ing produced at once. Aurore at last hits on a plan, and putting the pink ribbon on Girofle, introduces her to Mourzouk as Girofls, in order to gain time. In their terror, they allow her to go through the marriage ceremony with Mourzouk in place for her when she is brought back by the Admiral. Various expedients are restored to by Bolero and his wife to keep Girofle out of sight of her two husbands, until the return of her sister, and much confusion naturally ensues. The hour approaches at which Matamoros promised to re appear when a messenger arrives from him with the appalling news that he has been defeat-In view of the beauty of the day and the ed by the Pirates, and that Girofla is on her preceded it, it is not surprising that there | There is now no chance of her being recovered until the next day, although Matamoros intends starting again in pursuit; Bolero and Aurore, in an agony of terror, lock Mourzouk up in his room. The next day Mourzouk, furious at the treatment he has received, having smashed all the furniture in his room to calm himself a little, demands an explanation. Bolero attempts to explain, but fails, and begs Marasquin is most unwilling, but yields to the deception to save his father-in-law, with the understanding that Mourzouk is obliged to depart in an hour's time on an excedition. Mourzouk demands to be left alone to talk with his wife, and the time of departure approaching, he takes his leave. Bolero, Aurore, Marasquin and Girefle break into manifestations of joy at his departure, and Marasquin embraces Girofle with effusion. Mourzouk at this moment returns, and
