'We could not tell whether the Ever so many ladies on the streets, last play had any merit in it or not, so indifferently was it acted. It dragged from beginning to end. Even Wildman was without spirit; Clara contributed what she could to the interest of the occasion, and saide from these two, none are worthy mention except Kendrick; he played his part well. We are sorry that the result was not satisfactory, but truth compels us to say that it was quite The sky was as clear as crystal, the moon otherwise.

Death of Mr Jack Matthews.

Mr Jack Matthews, who hved near Providence Church, in this county, died on Wednesday night. He was very well known in this city and throughout the county. He had been laboring, for a long while, under mental aberration, and this lunacy led him, last Summer a year sgo, to announce himself a candidate for the lower House of the State Legislature, and to conduct a so-called canvass of the county for this position. He was an inoffensive creature, and dies with the ill-will of no one. He will be buried today at the Providence Church burying ground.

Attempt to Escape an Officer.

Yesterday aft rooon, two negroes, Henry Williams and Leonard Crockett, were taken into the office of W F Davidson, Esq., to be tried for stealing a hog, (case reported under our head of courts,) and Mr Davidson being at dinner, Constable King left the prisoners in charge of Mr John Roberts, while he went after the Justice. Williams walked to the door, as if to look out, and, thinking that he saw an opportunity to escape, jumped and ran. Mr Roberts gave pursuit, and as the fugitive heeled it down Trade street, fired two shots at him, but without effect. The negro turned the corner at Creswell's store, and struck toward California, a crowd following him and yelling. A youth, a son of policeman Healey, was coming up Church St, meeting the negro, and taking in the sitnation, seized a rock and hurled it at him, striking him on the head and bringing him down as if he had been shot. He was then secured and taken back, and his time behind the bars is now occupied in trying to ascertain the depth of the hole in his head.

Community's Duty Toward Its Press. In looking over Freedley's "Practical Treatise on Business." we find the very valuable extract which is given below. It is from a high source, and is well worthy at tention. The views therein set forth, are commended to the business men of this

"The true merchant will be a liberal but discriminating supporter of the press in his locality. He will not feel an obligation to patronize any and every thing that wears the form of a newspaper, but will scan carefully the intellectual ability and moral fit ness of those who assume the lofty responsibility of public teaching through the press. He will not encourage the dissemination ner continuance of jon-nals edited by the incompetent or unworthy; but it there be none other than these already in existence. none other than these aready in existence in his county, he will combine with men like himself to procure the establishment of such a journal as is needed, or the transfer of one already existing into the hands of some one qualified to guide opinio, and dispel mental darkness. Such a Journal he will liberally and steadly encourage and support by advertising in its columns at good prices, by urging upon other business men the duty of doing likewise, and by soliciting his customers and neighbors to give it at least their enbecarptions, regularly continued and uniformly said in advance. By pursuing this course, the merchant may do very much toward the diffusion of intelligence, the predominance of sound principles and the purification of merals. He need not be a political brawier nor habitual agitator on any subject—there is a more excellent way. He may give to an approved and in fluencial journal in his county from two to five hundred dellars' worth of advertising per annum, and procure frem others by the or one already existing into the hands of per annum, and procure from others by the power of his solicitations and example fire times as much more; while each name added to the list of its subscribers extends the publicity of his sunouncements and their potency in enlarging his business."

The card of the Traders' National Bank are polite and accommodating. Banking house one door East of the public square. Company Disbunded.

The adelaide Phillipps Opers Company, which was here not long ago, disbanded last week in Cincipnati, in consequence of Signo Tagliapetra, the baritone, having broker his contract and refusing to sing. He has been petted and spoiled, from all accounts during the recent tour of the company; beyond what he was able to bear, and grew too independent in consequence. Buit has been instituted against him for breach of contract. The troupe had magnificent bouses in all cities where it has been, and its breeking up was not in consequence of any financial embarrassment, but because its music was ruined by the withdrawal of the rediring member.

The Courts. Mayor's Court .- The people in town have ceased to de evil and have learned to do well. Again yesterday morning no cases were on the docket of this department of retributive justice (so to speak.) Before Justice Davidson .- Mary Brewer, orlared, for assault and battery upon Mary Deschamp, and was fined $1 and cost. The same lady was bound over in $25, to keep the peace toward all good citizens in general, and Miss Deschamp in particular. Henry Williams and Leonard Crockett, both colored, were up for stealing a hog from Mr. G W McDonald, in the country. They had tolled the hog away from home by means of corn and, getting the brute in a secluded spot, had gone for it and put it in a bag. Just as they got its form concealed in the bag aforesaid, some one called to them, and they dropped their prey and ran. Leonard flopped down in the middle of a big swamp, and laid flat on his stomach, in which position they found him, almost frozen to death. Justice Davidson offered to release them if they would give security in $100 but failing to do this, they were committed to jail.

There were some unimportant criminal matters from the country, before Justice

The Recent Charlotte Riot.

The following article is from the Hillsboro Recorder. It i- sensible and timely, and we commend it to those to whom it may concern: "The riot at Charlotte on Christmas day resulting in the killing of one negro, and the wounding of six or eight more, only shows how readily race antipathies may be inflamed by bad men, and how perilous is the foundation upon which the peace of Southern society stands. It may be safely said that it has been preserved by the forbearance of the white man. The aggression of a race unaccustomed to the exercise of freedom, ignorant of its privileges, insensate in its demands, intolerant of opposition, and impatient of the reasonable restraints of law, are the constant incentives to attacks upon the whites. And yet the negro is not so much to be blamed as the creatures who have used him as their tool. inspiring him with aspirations that of his own motion he would not dream of, and thrusting him to positions he is neither able to attain or competent to fill.

"Like all other eyils incident to an abnormal condition of human society, time alone will furnish the solution; and in the meantime, we hope the whi e people will contime the forbearance that has been so houorable to them, and which upon the withdrawal of the carpet bag element, will end in the perfect good understanding of the Traveling by Rail, but on Foot.

A gentleman who arrived in the city yeserday afternoon by the Carolina Central train, from Rutherford, proved his excellence as a racer, on the down trip, though his chosen occupation leads him to make rather a specialty of the weighty matters pertaining to the law. At Tuckasege Station ne got off the train, and took some little part in bessing the train hands while they unloaded a quantity of freight. He was to much engrossed, that when the train moved off he did not get on at first, and presently found it getting away from him He cut dirt lively, and one time caught hold of the railing, but had to let go again and take another start. The train moved faster and faster, and so did the gentleman from Rutherford. As it got further and further from him, he grew more and more frantic, and the lustiness with which he yelled after it, was only equaled by the rapidity with which he ran.

Conductor Finch and the passengers aver that the race, as viewed by them from the rear end of the ladies' coach, was the most exhilarating sight they ever witnessed, and to heighten the effect the wind got under the long drab overcoat worn by the gentleman from Butherford, causing it to stand out straight behind as wearer leaped cattle-guards and panted like the locomotive which was each moment pu ting greater distance between him and the gentlemen who viewed the race from the rear end of the train. Now if the gentleman from Rutherford is more remarkable for anything else tha... for the length of his overcoat, it is for the length of his legs; and it is but simple justice to these members, to say, that when the train reached the tank, three-quarters of a mile from Tuckasege, and stopped, they had brought their owner almost up to within speaking distance. The wind was still in his sails; the perspiration stood in beads upon his manly brow, and blood was in his eye, as he again laid hold upon the railing and swung up on the platform. He did not wait for breath, but began at once, taking the conductor's case first, then he went for the officers and agents of the road whom he knew ; then he took them up collectively, and those whom he did not knew by name. were "cussed under the general head of small fry." The passengers got their share, too ; so did the brakemen, and to say that the gentleman from Rutherford raved, and tore, and was furious, are expressions too feeble to convey the idea. The matter has been mentioned to the young man several times since the arrival of the train, and whenever it is, his upper lip gets up and cannot be induced to get down this stationary proclivity of the lip is otherwise known as "the griss."

Only a Beggar.

We see the following poem going the of Charlotte, appears in our columns this rounds of the paper. It was written by morning for the first time. The Board of Con. T.
