We grant all that is said of Mr Wildman; we have always found him personally, a gentleman; and to say that he pays his bills is but a plain fact. To say, however, that these things should purchase for him ammunity from criticism when he appears with a company upon the boards, and essays to entertain an audience, is to lay down a proposition which is preposterous; yet not more so than to ask exemption from criticism for every company that comes along, because, forsooth, this may drive it or some other from the town,

It will be seen by an advertisement in an other column, that this charming little lady will certainly re-appear before our people or the evening of Thursday next, when "Fadchon, the Cricket," will be produced. It need not be told our people how well Katie plays the part of Fanchon; for they have seen her, and having seen her in it once. will never forget her. We look forward to this as one of the greatest events of our theatrical season. The play itself is highly dramatic, and in the part which she assumes Miss Putnam has no superior, according to the judgment of competent critics . It is certain that we do not care to see it played better than she plays it, and we are not less critical than the average theatre-goer. We see that our Salisbury friends will also have the privilege of witnessing this company on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings next. We can assure them that a treat awaits them; and we have no idea that they will miss the opportunity of witnessing this really first class presentation of the legitimate drama. Trains will be run from Statesville to Salisbury, for the purpose of carrying persons to this performance, and half fare tickets will be issued. It is worth a hundred miles' travel, any day, to see Katie Putnam, and we expect to hear of a large number of the Statesville people uniting with Salisbury to do honor to the bewitching little actress and danseuse.

The Recent Warm Spell.

The weather has regained all the necessary coolness, and now the old people are trying to study up a parallel for the spell which has ast ended. One of the old at people in the world, (we suppose) told the reporter. yesterday, that in the winter of 1829-if our memory serves us right-there was a spel of weather very much similar to that which has prevail d since about the 20th of December, except that the weather was warmer, in anything, and of longer continuance. Then nearly all the meat in the country was spoiled; the trees budded and the flowers came out; people put on their light clothing; and everything animate and inanimate. seemed to feel that spring had come. Presently, however, all at once the cold weather foreclosed the mortgage which it had on the face of the earth, and then there was a derained entirely, by one night's frost; the flowers, which had unfolded their petals and pared their bosoms for the stroke, received it with deadly, blighting force, and next morning were no more; people did not get back into their flannels and other winter duds quick enough, and colds pneumonias and rheumatism kept the doctors busy 'And I mind." said the old man, as he put in another chew, "that I come mighty nigh going off myself, that pop-laid up with the numony for six weeks." Then we said we were sorry he had such a bad time of it, and noped there wouldn't be so much sickness after this spell, and the old gentleman said ne hoped so too. And then the reporter moved on.
