Book Bindery in Charlotte.

The Lancaster (S. C.) Ledger, says : "Mr Koellsch, formerly book-keeper for Wittkowsky & Rintels, has established in Charlotte a Book-bindery. Unusual Growth. We saw, on yesterday, a remarkable Irish potato growth. Change of Base.

We are sorry to learn that the headquarters of Mr N M Johnston, who has been for some time past the agent in this city of the Atlantic Coast Line, have been changed to Cincinnati, from which city he came when he located here. He will continue to represent the same line, for which he has made such an efficient agent since his residence here began. > Concert at the Charlotte Institute for Young Ladies.

A vocal and instrumental concert will be given on Monday evening next, by the pupils of the Charlotte Institute for Young Ladies, under the direction of Miss Sallie Peck, the musical instructress. These scholars have been under Miss Peck's tutelage for only a short time, but basing our judgment upon our knowledge of her musical gifts and qualifications to teach, we venture the assertion that they will do neither themselves nor her, discredit. A cordial invitation is extended the public to be present on the occasion of this concert, and we have ne doubt that our citizens will gladly avail themselves of the opportunity.

Always Wanting Corrections.

The colored race is peculiar. The reporter never has an item in the morning paper concerning a darkey, in which the name is mentioned in any shape or form, but what he is met at the foot of the steps on his way to the office, by that came darkey with a copy of the paper in his hand .-'You'se de 'porter, ain't you?" is the first question. "Yes." "Well, sah, dare's somethin' in de paper here 'bout me which I'de like to hab yer 'krect." "Well, ain't all As soon as the weather permits, Rey E H | that is said of you true?" "Yes, sah, but Harding will fulfill his engagement to lec- yer see," and then follows a long explanation of why it happened to be so. As soon ness forced him to break this engagement as it is found that no correction is needed, all that was stated being true, the reporter moves on, the explanation continuing until he reaches the top of the steps and disappears in the dcor.

Lack of Drives.

Charlotte is more deficient, we suppose, in good drives, than any place in the State, and it is a lack which operates seriously upon the pleasure of the young people of the community. You cannot go in any direction and strike a good level road, under a mile and a half or two miles. The best, perhaps is in the direction of Sugar Creek Church, but before the good road can be reached, the heavy, rugged hills beyond the Carolina Central Depot, must be climbed. In all other directions the roads alternate between hills and hollows which interfere greatly with the pleasures of a drive. However, to see the number of happylooking young people dashing through the streets in flashy equipages on a pleasant evening when the roads are good a stranger would not suppose that there was any cause to complain of the drives in the vicinity of

Downfall of Charlotte."

Under the caption, and with an exclamation point after the last word, the Bakersville (Mitchell county) Independent, of last week, gives the following account of a mishap which befell one of our young men while "gallivanting" in the mountains: "Mr Rankin, drummer for the firm of Walter Brem & Martin. Charlotte, N. C., honored our town with a visit last week. While in our midst he had the pleasure of taking a horse back ride with one of our young ladies. After riding some considerable distance up Cane Creek, enjoying themselves in a pleasant conversation about the grand old mountains, whose towering heights surrounded them on either side, and the 'loyely' appearance of things in general, they returned, and just about the time they reached the bridge, which is constructed across a small stream in front of our sanctum deor, the horse on which Mr. Rankin was mounted, had the extreme misfortune to 'stump his toe,' and down came 'Rankin, Brandy and all? but the young mun being very active, turned several summersaults in mid-air, and was at length brought low on a downy pillow of mud. He has our deepest sympathies, and as a friend we would advise him the next time he starts out rusticating to take a 'sure-footed' horse."

Yesterday was another day when all the criminal business was confined to one court -that of Justice Davidson. The Mayor had no court, and none of the Magistrates except the one named, had aught but civil business. The first case of the day before Justice Davidson, was that of Clayton Fenizer against Elias Sannders; this was an order of arrest, in which it was charged that high estimate-one-third. A Slauderous Report.

The rumor spoken of below has gained considerable currency in this community, therefore we copy the following from the Lancaster (S. C.) Ledger: "A report has obtained circulation in Charlotte and other places through some eyil disposed person, that the firm of Hasseltine & Chafee of this place has failed for a half million of dollars. It appears in tracing up the slander that the report originated at Rock Hill, and was whispered there by some person who was refused credit by the firm. It is only necessary for us to say that it is a base fabrication, and that the firm of Hasseltine & Chafee is upon as sound a footing as any firm in the country."

Weather Prognostications.

We have more respect now for the "Old Probabilities" than we ever had before, or eyen supposed we could have. He has been keeping up with all this variable weather for the past 2 months, or rather keeping ahead of it, and predicting it in advance, more successfully than we had any right to expect of him: and notwithstanding hardly any 2 days have been alike, Probs. has informs us, with astonishingly few errors, just how it would be. This brings Baker's prophecies to mind; he has ceased furnishing them to the press, because no pay was allowed him, and we haven't seen his probabilities for this month. Wonder how he has kept up with the variable spell?

Republican Paper.

We understood, yesterday, that there is serious talk of establishing a Republican daily paper in this city. We suppose that, if this is done, it will be only a temporary publication, put on foot to fight the Republican battles during the campaigns of this summer and fall. It will, of course, if started, be supported by the government, since there are not enough Republicans in all the piedmont country, no, not in all the State, who can read, to maintain a daily paper, and besides, the breach is so great in the ranks here, that all of the party strength can not be concentrated upon the bantling, which will be, if we are correctly informed, under the auspices of the post-office wing.

The Southern Life Insurance Company. Particulars regarding the bankruptcy of this institution are anxiously looked for, in this city, as well as elsewhere, owing to the fact that many of our citizens have large personal interests in it. What we present below is the most detailed account of the causes of the failure that we have, so far been able to arrive at. The agent in this city on yesterday morning received a letter from Gen A H Colquitt, of Atlanta, who is Vice President of this department, detailing the facts about as they are told below by a reporter of the Atlanta Herald, who interviewed Gen Colquitt concerning the matter. The Herald says:

"Some three years ago, the Southern Life Insurance Company, through its headquarters in Memphis, absorbed the business of the 'Carolina Life Insurance Co.' The terms of the absorption as shown by the contract were that the Southern Life assumed all the living risks of the Carolina Company, but did not become responsible for its debts, or losses already accrued.

"Shortly after the absorption took place some of the old creditors of the Carolina-Life commenced suit against the Southern Life, lemanding settlement of their claims, on the general assertion that having taken all the assets of the Carolina Company, the Southern Life became responsible for all the liabilities of that Company. The suits were instituted in Tennessee, and after tedlous trials, a sufficient number of test cases were decided to show that the Southern Life would have to pay the debts of the Carolina Company. This it could have done, had it not been that the assets of that company shrank to almost nothing when an attempt was made to realize upon them. A few days since, being convinced that the company could not carry the load, and desiring to avoid any priority of claims and prevent a sacrifice of its assets the company at Memphis determined to go into voluntary bank-ruptcy. This it did, and hence the dispatch

The Herald says that this department of the company has been doing a fine and paying business, and the Constitution says that the number of policies in force and under care of this department, is between 2,000 25.00. No authorized statement has as yet been made of the affairs of the company, and it is presumed that some time will elapse before this can be done.

The Dogs in Charlotte. We do not believe that it is much of an ex aggeration, if it is an exaggeration at all. to say that in Charlotte there is one dog for every man. The streets and yards are full of them. If one wants an idea of the number, he must take a walk through the back streets and alleys, and in front of the negro huts; this class of people have at least one dog for every household; frequently more. What their fancy is for this, will perhaps never be known until the time comes when all the mysteries of the world shall be revealed, for they have hard scrambling to get enough for themselves and their families to eat, and the dog is a remorseless consumer who produces nothing at all; but the fact stands, that they do own them, and probably for no other reason than the additional dignity that is given them by reason of the fact that "they own a dog." But why we mentioned this matter in the first place, was to call attention to the fact that the tax is not paid on more than onethird of these worthless curs, and this is a Now who supposes that there are no more than 300 dogs in Charlotte? To put the number down at 1000, one would not miss it far; yet all over 300 go untaxed. This is not right. It is an injustice to the city, and likewise to those who do pay the taxes on their dogs. The police and City Marshal are not to blame for this for it is not expected of them to go upon every man's premises and hunt up his dogs to see if they are tax-paid; but at the beginning of the next dog killing ury if some one were paid for this very service-to hunt out the dogs and kill all those larly organized dog-killing brigades, and the idea is a good one. We repeat that such the law if possible-who have evaded it in the past and will do so in the future -would Than have his dog killed. On the other is jan12

> [COMMUNICATED.] Deer Parks in England.

In nothing does English and American taste differ more widely than in the estimate they put upon trees. An Englishman says, "Money can build fine houses, buy fine berses, equipages and furniture, but it cannot build a fine tree," and if called upon to decide between the destruction of his ancestral trees and his ancestral mansion, he would say, "Let the house go I can rebuild it, but it would take centuries of time to replace the trees." John Randolph was an exception to the American taste in this mater, and loved trees like an Englishman, Once, on returning home, he found a fine tree cut down near his house, and was informed that it was injuring his house, "Then why did you not move the house?" was his indignant reply. No people eyer had such opportunities for forming magnificent parks as we American have had. Just thin out one of our fine forests, so as to allow sunlight enough to permit the growth of grass, and we have at once a park. Now go to stock-raising, and there is nothing that will pay you better that one of these parks. In Kentucky they call them woodland pastures. The largest park in England is Tatton, Cheshire county; t is eleven miles in circumference, and is well stocked with herds of red and fallow deer. The oldest park, worth a visit from every tourist, is in Kent county, near Tunbridge Wells. It is a wild and beautiful domain called Eridge, and belongs to the Earl of Abergayenny, whose family name is Neville, so well known in English history. The Earl of Winchelsea owns Eastwell which is celebrated for the variety of its scenery, and the immense size of its ferns. The ferns are tall enough to reach the shoulders of a man on horseback, and completely conceal the deer, which can only be discovered in these ferney glades by their leaps and bounds. Much complaint has, of course, been made by the radicals, of the uselessness of parks, and the great amount of land, lost to the farming population. But modern research shows clearly that they purify the air, supply moisture to the surrounding crops and produce other benefits to the whole country which could not be regained for centuries, if they were once destroyed. But for these parks, England would be a treeless country. As long as Spain had trees, her people were powerful and vigorous, but whole forests were destroyed to build her fleets, (she was once the great maritime power of the world) and there seems to be some, as yet, unexplained, connection between trees and human health, mental and physical.
