BLAINE'S POLITICAL DEMISE.

If we can place any reliance upon the press dispatches Blaine has been certainly overtaken and caught! In his political demise, the Republican party has lost its leader and head, and the country one of the most brilliant debaters of the day.

In the recent Democratic State Convention of Virginia, Maj. John W. Daniel and Col. F. W. M. Holladay were nominated as electors for the State at large by acclamation.

Conflicting endorsed the infamous dispatch of the brutal Sheridan in which he characterized the best citizens of New Orleans as banditti and called upon the President to declare them out-laws to be shot down like dogs.

HEAR COLORED MEN!

This is neither partisan, ku klux, nor Rebel testimony. It is the testimony of a Captain in the Federal Army and it is the testimony of the Republican Attorney General of Mississippi under the Administration of Adelbert Ames.

"Very likely fifteen or twenty negroes may be killed, but it would result to the benefit of the Republican party." So says—

Adelbert Ames, the Republican ex-Governor of Mississippi.

Real Nice Man.

It was an unexpected surprise to court and audience to have James Saunders limp out and make use of such kind and courteous language as he did.

"Never mind my linen vest, Mr. Grad," replied his Honor. "You are charged with drunkenness."

"Am I? Dear me? I wish I wasn't! If there is anything I dislike it is to be charged with breaking the law.

"Well, I'm glad you won't. I was going to say that I know I was drunk, and I'll plead guilty. There's no use of my lying and crawling around and making you sit up there until your back aches."

"Any excuse for being drunk?" "Do you wish me to have an excuse?" softly inquired Mr. Grad.

"If you wish me to have one I'll do so; if you don't want me to have one I'll be hanged first. I came here to accommodate you, and I'll do just as you say."

"Where do you live?" "In several places, your Honor. I've got a home in Wassa, a cross-eyed aunt in Saginaw and a fat uncle in Canada. I visit around among them."

"What induced you to get drunk last night?" "The court looked at him a long time and then motioned for him to go out doors."

"Thanks—a thousand thanks, your Honor. I see that you desire me to go home. I will go. If I am ever in Detroit again I shall make it a point to come and see you!"

"If you do I shall make it a point to send you to the House of Correction!" "You will, of course you will, and it would be serving me just right!" was the kind and candid rejoinder.

THE BIGGEST HOG IN THE WORLD.—[From the Palmyra (Mo.) Spectator.]—The famous hog owned by Mr. William Bush, of Monroe, and so celebrated in these parts, passed through the city on Tuesday last, in charge of its owner, on the way to Philadelphia, the seat of the great Centennial celebration.

It is of a black and white color, and is a cross of the China and Poland. It is five years old; was born in this (Marion) county, on the farm of Mr. Joseph Pond. It measures 7 feet 4 inches in length, 3 feet 4 inches in height, is full 30 inches across the back, weighs 1,540 pounds.

The Watchman says that the Radical Convention for the 7th Congressional District, met in Salisbury last Tuesday. There were present just 25 white Republicans and about half a dozen blacks.

The Greensboro Patriot says that Mr. Thos G. Kittrell, who lives near Kittrell depot, Granville county, raised last year, with one old, gray mule, 50 to 60 barrels of corn, 4 bags of cotton, 5000 lbs of tobacco, 90 to 70 bushels of wheat, 50 bushels of Irish potatoes and sweet potatoes, oates, peas and beans—beans in large quantities.

The Beaufort Eagle says: It is an unusual occurrence for a canoe load of turpentine to come to a town now. The price is so low that the trees have been abandoned.

BLAINE.

His Explanation of the Letters and Why He Kept Them—He Declines to Give Them to the Committee.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1.—The following is an extract from Blaine's statement: "I called on the three gentlemen—Mr. Atkins, Mr. Fisher and Mr. Mulligan. At the Riggs House, and in the parlor of Mr. Atkins I had some conversation with Mulligan about these letters, and asked him to show them to me. He did show them, with some apparent reluctance. I said to him, 'Why, you are not afraid of my keeping them, are you?' and he said 'No, and handed them to me, I looked them all over, and discovered that there was only one letter in the list that at all bore upon the question before the committee, and even that one, forced construction, and not in reality. The conversation then became somewhat general between the four gentlemen, including myself, in the room. After a little while Mr. Mulligan went up stairs to Mr. Fisher's room, right overhead. I was talking with Mr. Atkins and Mr. Fisher for a few moments, and then I started up the stairs and knocked at the door and was admitted, and there I talked with Mr. Mulligan for some time. I may have been there, I think, the best part of an hour; but the form that he gives the interview, about my offering him a consulship and about my being ruined, and all that sort of thing, is mere fancy. Nothing of the kind occurred. I talked as calmly as I am talking this moment. Very soon said to him, 'I would like to see one letter among those.' I wanted to see the letters on which he based his testimony. He handed me the package and I looked them all over, and I said to him, as I said in my statement, 'I am perfectly willing you should keep that; but here is a mass of my private correspondence, covering many years, and relating to matters of the investigation, which it would probably be embarrassing to have published, as any man's private correspondence would be—and I don't want it published. You ought to give me those letters; you have no right to them. There are only two persons in the world that have a right to them—one is the writer and the other the recipient to whom they were written. Now, if you will give those letters to Mr. Fisher I will be abundantly satisfied. They will then be in safe hands.' Mr. Fisher had before, himself, in my presence, requested that they should be given to him, in the first conversation in the lower room. Mulligan refused. He said he did not know what might transpire in his examination to-day; and he said, with a good many G-d's, that he was going to hold those letters for his protection and his vindication. I said, 'When you get through the examination will you give them to me?' He said 'No; if anybody publishes any of the letters, I will sue him. The first time when he handed them to me he showed reluctance, and as I have above stated, I remarked, 'You are not afraid of my keeping them, are you?' and he answered 'Oh, no,' and handed them to me, but he gave them to me the second time without any reluctance. Mr. Fisher up from the lower room? He did so, and very soon Mr. Fisher came up and we had a little conversation in which I repeated before Mr. Fisher what Mulligan had said, his declaration of rather his menace, and I said, this is very grossly unfair, Mr. Fisher. I then said that I would be glad if Mr. Fisher would take charge of the letters that they were rightfully in his possession, or rightfully in mine, but not in any third person's. Mulligan repeated again in Mr. Fisher's presence, this declaration that he would feel himself at liberty to publish these letters at any time he saw fit if anybody should provoke him into wrath, by any comment on his testimony, and I said, the somewhat enlarged facilities in the American press for making criticisms upon everybody, I found that my private correspondence hung by the throat of his taking offense at any of the thousand and one paragraphs that might be set afloat in the papers, and I said to him: 'under these circumstances I will not give these letters up, and in order that he might not be mistaken as to the ground of my action, I called Mr. Atkins from the lower room, for I wanted to tell him the ground on which I stood. I said: 'I will not return these letters, because you threaten to make a use of them which is illegitimate, which is unfair, which is entirely unjust; and I have no idea that any man shall take my private correspondence and hold it as a menace over my head to be used at his beck or option for his own purpose or under some lady's direction. We went down stairs, and he repeated his statement with very great emphasis, and I said, 'very good; I will retain the letters.' The chairman: I ask at your hands the production of those letters for the perusal of the committee and not for publication; that the committee may see for themselves whether they bear upon the question.

Mr. Blaine—In private; with no publicity, but I certainly will not make them public unless they bear upon the question.

Mr. Blaine—I will take occasion to consult my counsel in regard to it.

The chairman—You decline then to produce them?

Mr. Blaine—For the present I decline.

The Charges Against Mr. Kerr—The Story of the Appointee.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Augustus P. Green was examined on Saturday last by the committee. The injunction of secrecy was removed from his testimony to-day.

He testified that he is 48 years of age; a resident of New York city; has no occupation at present, but has an income sufficient to maintain him. He then testified relative to his visits to Washington and his appointment.

He said that after having applied to his representative, who told him that he had filled the vacancy he spoke about it to Harney, who told him he would procure an appointment for a consideration; that he agreed to the proposition to pay either three or four hundred dollars. Witness then went on to say that he was introduced to Mr. Kerr by Harney, and that Mr. Kerr asked him to call at his rooms, which he did.

Mr. Kerr talked with him about his military services, and testimonials, after which the conversation turned upon other subjects of general interest. Mr. Kerr then said he would like to have some letters from prominent men in New York addressed to him personally requesting the appointment. Witness replied that he would endeavor to get them, and he did go to New York. Witness testified that upon his return from New York Mr. Kerr went with him to the War Department, where his name was entered for appointment. He (witness) never advised Mr. Kerr about arrangement with Harney; but Harney told him that he had paid the money to Mr. Kerr.

In reply to questions put by the chairman, Mr. Clymer witness stated that Mr. Kerr examined him very carefully as to his recommendations and general capacity. Witness three years after his appointment stopped at New Albany to pay his respects to Mr. Kerr, which he would not have done if he had believed that Mr. Kerr received the money which he (witness) paid to Harney. He did not then believe, and does not now believe, that Mr. Kerr received this money.

Nothing can be worse for a child than to be frightened. The effect of the scare is slow to recover from. It remains sometimes until maturity, as is shown by many instances of morbid sensitiveness and excessive nervousness. Not infrequently fear is employed as a means of discipline. Children are controlled by being made to believe that something terrible will happen them, and punished by being shut up in dark rooms, or by being put out in dark places they stand in dread of. No one, without vivid memory of his own childhood, can comprehend how entirely such things are controlled by being made to believe that something terrible will happen them, and punished by being shut up in dark rooms, or by being put out in dark places they stand in dread of.

One by one the money princes pass in their checks. Vanderbilt is now lying very low. For forty years he has drugged, drugged, drugged for his nature, in order that he might have a bigger pile than any other man on the continent, and now, in the declining of his balance, he suddenly finds himself physically bankrupt and leaves him, out of all his landed estates, only a small plot of ground six feet by two.

To DRIVE AWAY MOSQUITOES.—Campher is a most powerful agent in driving away mosquitoes. A camphor bag hung in an open case will prove a barrier to their entrance. Camphorated spirits applied as perfume to the face and hands will act as an effectual preventive; but when bitten by them, romatic vinegar is the best antidote.
