St. Petersburg, July 26.—A dispatch says that England remonstrated with Russia against the proceedings of the Moscow Slavonian Committee.

Versailles, July 26.—The Senate adopted the bill authorizing the National exhibition.

LONDON, July 26.—Sir William Kaye, the statesman and author is dead. Aged 62 years.

Vikna, July 26.—A special says the Servians intend withdrawing from all their positions, to within the frontier.

The prevailing opinion is that the Turks will not follow them further. This condition is favorable to an armistice.

Great depression exists in the Serbian camps. Other advices say, that Abdul Kirwin intends to force his way to Kragujevac, where he will dictate terms.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The Herald has cable specials stating that five letters had been received from its correspondent in Africa, Henry M Stanley, dated July 19, 1876; Aug 15, 1876; and Jan 18th, 1878, relating many hair breadth escapes, and fights with savages and numerous explorations and discoveries, among which was the discovery of a tribe of pale faces, in the high uplands of the Gambarraga mountains, forming an entirely different race of people to the black skinned denizens of the plains.

Grand Ratification by Tammany—Speeches by Distinguished Men.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The Tammany Hall Democratic ratification meeting was held last night. Three stands were outside the Hall. Chas A Dana presided inside the Hall, and made a glorious speech. Resolutions were adopted pledging the united strength and support of their Democratic fellow citizens to Tilden and Hendricks, and expressing sympathy with men of all ranks, mechanics and laborers, who felt so much the evil effects of the Republican mal-administration.

Hon John Hancock of Texas said, that this great demonstration refuted the assertion that the Democrats were divided. He spoke of the disgrace brought on the country by the Republican party, and said that though they did their duty during the war, the Democrats, who were also true to the Union, had now to rescue the country from Republican corruption. He denounced military rule in the South, and declared that the Southern men are loyal to the flag.

Gov Walker of Virginia, said: "This great demonstration of to-night will vitalize the Democratic faith throughout our common country. The South would give ten out of twelve electoral votes for Tilden and Hendricks."

Hon Chas E Hooker, of Mississippi, an ex-Confederate General, said: "If the men who crossed swords during the war could control the government we would have had ten years of prosperity in the South."

Hon Mr Tarbox, of Massachusetts, contrasted Tilden and Hayes, and as a Union man, declared his belief in the loyalty of the South.

The last speaker was Hon Mr Franklin, of Missouri, who said that the Southerners had come back to the Union, and meant to stay.

Reinforcements for Crook—Preparations for an Early Attack.

NEW YORK, July 26.—A special to the Tribune from Fort Fetterman, Wyoming Territory, says: "General Merritt's column of the 5th Cavalry leaves here to-morrow to join General Crook. It consists of 10 companies of Cavalry, and about 100 regiments of infantry. It will reach the main command about the 22nd of August. General Crook will then have 25 Companies of Cavalry, and 10 Companies of Infantry, with 200 Snake Indians."

With this force active operations will be immediately begun against Sitting Bull's forces. The command will even then be much smaller in numbers than the Indians against whom it will contend. Any co-operation from General Terry's troops will hardly be practicable, before another engagement is had, as the Indians are encamped very near General Crook, who is evidently preparing for the struggle. The building of posts at the mouth of the Tongue and Big Horn rivers will begin at once, under the protection of General Terry's forces. It is probable, that the campaign against the Indians will be conducted entirely by General Crook, under the direction of General Sheridan."

Stanley, the Great African Explorer, Heard From—Important Decisions—The Indian Massacre—How well Custer Fought—The Death Scene—How Curly Escaped to Tell the News.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The Herald's cable special respecting its correspondent in Africa, Henry M Stanley, says: "We are rejoiced to announce that the fullest information of Stanley's movements and adventures in the wild regions, around Lake Victoria Nyanza, have reached us after a long and anxious waiting, since the receipt of the last intelligence of the great explorer, in June 1875, during which time doubt and uncertainty, as to his safety, caused many to abandon all hope of his return to civilization. Stanley has surprised us with not less than 5 letters from the heart of Equatorial Africa, full of the most important and interesting descriptions of that region, and of his own perilous and difficult journeys, that have reached us since he announced the discovery of Livingstone."

The Herald in a communication from Bismarck, D T, dated, July 12th, from an officer high in command of the forces operating against the Indians, says the Crow Indian Curly, is believed to be the only survivor of 250 men, who went into action with Custer. He is very clear in his knowledge of the fight, and has made a statement that he was down with two other Crows, and went into action with Custer. The General, he says, kept down the river on the North bank, for four miles after Reno had crossed to the South side above. Custer's object was to cut off the Indians. He thought Reno would drive down the valley at the same time and attack the village on two sides, he believing Reno would take it at the upper end, while he, Custer, would go in at the lower end. Custer had to go further down the river, and further away from Reno than he wished on account of a steep bank, along the North side, but at last he found a ford, and dashed for it. The Indians met him and poured in a heavy fire from across the narrow river. Custer dismounted to fight on foot, but could not get his skirmishers over the stream. Meantime hundreds of Indians on foot and on ponies poured over the river which was only about three feet deep, and filled the ravines on each side of Custer's men. Custer then fell back to some high ground beyond him, and seized the ravines in his immediate vicinity. The Indians completely surrounded Custer and poured in a terrible fire from all sides. They charged Custer on foot in vast numbers, and were again and again driven back.

The fight began about 2 o'clock and lasted, Curly says, almost until the sun went down over the hills. The men fought desperately and after the ammunition in their belts was exhausted, went to their saddle bags and got more, and continued the fight. Curly says more Indians were killed than Custer had men. He also says that Big Chief, lived until nearly all of his men had been killed and wounded, and went about encouraging his soldiers to fight on. He got a shot in his left side and sat down with his pistol in his hand. Another shot struck Custer in the breast and he fell over. The last officer killed was a man who rode a white horse believed to be Lieut Cook, adjutant of the Seventh, as Lieutenants Cook and Calhoun, were the only officers who rode white horses, and Lieut Calhoun was found dead on the skirmish line near the ford, and probably fell early in the action. Curly says when he saw Custer he was hopelessly surrounded. He watched his opportunity to get a Sioux blanket, put it on, and worked up a ravine and when the Sioux charged he got among them and they did not know him from one of their own men. There were some mounted Sioux, and seeing one fall, Curly ran to him mounted his pony and galloped down as if going toward the white men, but went up a ravine and got away. He says as he rode off the battle field, a dozen or more soldiers, in a ravine fighting with the Sioux all armed then. He thinks all were killed, as they were out-numbered five to one, and apparently dismounted. These men were no doubt part of the thirty-five missing men reported in the official despatches of General Terry. Curly says he saw one cavalry soldier who had got away. He was well mounted but shot through both hips, and Curly thinks he died of his wounds, starved to death in the bad lands, or more likely his trail was followed, and he was killed by the Sioux. Curly did not leave Custer until the battle was nearly over, and he describes it as desperate in the extreme. He is quite sure the Indians had more killed than Custer had white men with him, and he says the soldiers fought until the last one fell. The other Crow Indians in the battle were killed.
