DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS IN NEW YORK.

The New York Democratic State Convention, says the Baltimore Sun, which met at Saratoga yesterday for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor, in the place of the Hon. Horatio Seymour, who declined to accept the nomination, made its work short, sharp and decisive by nominating on the first ballot the Hon Lucius Robinson, the present Comptroller of the State, over a number of able and popular competitors, including Clarkson N Potter, one of the leading Democrats of the State. Mr. Robinson received a majority of all the votes, and before the result of the ballot could be announced the yotes for the other candidates had been changed to him, and he was hominated by acclamation amidst great applause. The nominee was a prominent candidate for the nomination before the former convention, and his friends claim would have then been the nominee but for the introduction of the name of Mr Seymour The Hon Lucius Robinson has figured extensively in New York politics, and The Effect at the North-A Bomis regarded as a very efficient officer and a man of the sternest integrity Before the war he was a democrat of the school of Silas Wright. After the war broke out he became a war democrat, and was a very decided Union man, without, however, it is claimed, abandoning his democratic principles. When nominated during the war by the republicans and Union men of New York for comptroller of the State he did not write a letter of acceptance or commit himself in any way further than to declare himself in favor of the preservation of the Union and the crushing out of secession.
