Investigation into the Using Troops for Election Purposes—Why Grant was not Impeached—The Confederate Element Saved Him—Senate Argues, Nods and Meditates the Whole Night on the Electoral Bill.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 24. The sub-committee on privileges and elections will commence to investigate the Alabama election, to-morrow but will not visit Alabama.

The bill to extend the time for completing the Northern Pacific Railroad, for amending the Texas Pacific Railroad acts and for fixing rates of transportation across the railroad bridge at Omaha, were reported and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The resolution for a select committee on the use of troops in the South to influence the election was adopted. After a discussion in which the proposed mode of procedure in sending for persons and papers, was characterized as indecent and against the proprieties and etiquette of official life, and in which Watterson, of Kentucky, intimated that impeachment proceedings against the President, had only been prevented early in the session by the opposition of what was termed the Confederate element.

In the Senate, Sargeant argued that the President of the Senate should count the vote as part of the Executive Department of the Government. Mr. Conkling concluded his speech. The Senate will remain in session all night. No one doubts the Senate will pass the bill.

The Texas Pacific Railroad bill is at the bottom of the calendar of the Committee of the Whole. Thirty-five bills precede it. It will require a two-thirds vote to reach it this session. Ten million bonds of 5-20's of May and Nov '65, interest ceases on 24th April.
