The Times' Vienna correspondent explains the vote in the Chamber. He says: Although the resolution adopted by the Chamber speaks of severing the bonds between Turkey and Roumania, and the Emperor's government at the conclusion of peace to secure an independent position, it leaves the government to use their discretion in acting according to circumstances, so that for the present the whole matter is shelved.

Bucharest Journals state that the Turks have crossed the Danube at Ciocanesh, stolen 1,200 sheep and killed a shepherd and some cattle.

The Telegraph's special from Batoum Friday, midnight, says: "About five o'clock this morning the Russian forces which had been largely augmented for the purpose, advanced with batteries of field artillery, and made a furious attack upon the heights defending Batoum on the land side, which were occupied by Bashi Bazouks. The Ottoman troops were entrenched in the usual effective manner upon the slopes and ledges of these hills, and upon the advance of the enemy they opened on his columns a terrible and well-sustained fire of cannon and musketry, which literally mowed the Russians down in swaths. They fell by scores and hundreds, on the plain below the Turkish positions. During their attempts to make way against this fire, a body of Turkish horse and footmen taking advantage of a thick forest, broke forth upon the flank of the Russian column, and effected a great slaughter. The Russians being upon ground perfectly open, and having no chance but to fight or fly, in a short time the spot which was the scene of this hard movement, became covered with dead and dying Russians. But the enemy quickly brought up reinforcements, and the battle was renewed with much determination for many hours. The efforts of the assailants were desperately maintained, but towards midday their artillery fire gradually slackened and they at length withdrew.

A correspondent of the Telegraph, describing the battle near Batoum, says: "I myself was an eye witness of this important engagement from the first to the last, and can testify that the Ottoman soldiers behaved with a gallantry which was most admirable. They had, however, during a great part of the action, the advantage of entrenched positions on high ground, and it was only by the most gallant and desperate charges, compared to those effected upon the open, that the assailants succeeded in forcing their way to the foot of the heights. The attack commenced at six o'clock, and was won by the extraordinary courage of the Bashi Bazouks. The dead and wounded on the Russian side will exceed 4,000. The engagement lasted over eight hours actual fighting. The last
