NOTES AND NEWS.

Chas. R. Jones writes: "There is a Boston man who has listened to fifty-two Fourth of July orations, and does not know enough to keep silent."

The tendency of the colored citizen to request little gratuities is clearly prophesied in Holy Writ. Doesn't the Bible say: "And Ethiopia shall stretch forth her hand?"—Chicago Times.

Young Militants Spilkins promises to become a joker in time. The other day he labelled a private bottle that his father keeps in the side-board, "Par's nips."

The long-drawn-out "ha," which a man utters after a heavy pull at a bottle is not down in the dictionary as a part of speech, or a word worthy of definition, but there is more real expression and eloquence in it than in the noblest oration of Cicero.

A Catholic paper says the Catholics now have a missionary force of 1,700 in Hindostan, and during the past year there have been 10,062 conversions, the largest number, 2,002, being in the Pondicherry district.

Cleveland young women write comments on the margins of the library novels they read. One emotional creature writes: "The pangs of love are grate, I have been there myself."

A New York State tramp was throwing stones at a train of cars, when an engine came along and divided him into sixteen pieces and a bunch of fiddle strings.

Mr. Robert Burdett, the Burlington Hawkeye humorist, is as famous at home for his tender care of his invalid wife as he is for his funny paragraphs. He has been her nurse for years, doing his editorial work at home, and visiting the Hawkeye office only for an hour or two in the day.

Our neighbor in the Democrat with his issue of yesterday, entered upon his twenty-sixth volume. Brother Yates is one of the best and most successful journalists of the State. We hope that both he and his excellent paper may "live long and prosper."

Mr. Hayes' civil service order has been doing some service in Mississippi. In that State it has kicked the Republican party over the office holders treated the President's order just as if he had issued it in earnest, and the result is the disbandment of the party, there being nobody, scarcely, but office-holders on the executive committee.

The incident of the recent meeting at the White House between ex-Congressman Smith, of this State, and Henry Ward Beecher, is going the rounds of the press. The pleasing intelligence which Smith conveyed to the ecclesiastical Henry in the course of his fraternal salutation to the effect that he had named his most promising Jersey bull after him, is variously commented upon. The Atlanta Constitution speaks of the Horn Blower as "one Smith on an ungodly statesman from North Carolina."

COL STEELE AND THE REVENUE SYSTEM.—The Raleigh News of yesterday contains a strong letter from Hon. Walter L. Steele, member of Congress from this district, in condemnation of the method by which the internal revenue laws are administered, and in condemnation of the unrighteous and oppressive system. He favors the abolition of the entire system. (We quote from his letter,) and desires that all revenues shall be raised by a tax on imports, so adjusted that revenue and not protection, shall be consulted. He believes that this plan will afford all the fostering care which the manufacturing interests should require at the hands of the Federal government, and that other occupations.

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, speaking of the recent removal of special treasury agent W. B. Moore, says: "It is a noteworthy fact that the only person in the Treasury Department in whose retention General Grant seemed to take a personal interest before his departure for Europe was this same W. B. Moore. General Grant addressed a personal letter to Secretary Sherman requesting that Moore be retained, and received a prompt promise in reply that Moore should not be removed. The President was notified of the fact on Friday when he directed Moore's removal, but he replied that as Moore was represented to him as a bad man, the removal must take place."

THE COLORED EMIGRATION MOVEMENT.

In different parts of the South there seems to be a growing tendency in the minds of some of the colored people in favor of emigration to Liberia. The interest in this matter is especially observable in North and South Carolina; and in the latter State the colored race is very much exercised on the subject. The leaders of the movement in South Carolina claim that forty thousand of the colored race in that State have entered into an agreement to emigrate to Liberia, and that they "can no more be stopped than the children of Israel could be stopped from coming out of Egypt."

In this State the movement has assumed shape by the organization, several months ago, of a Colored State Emigration Association. In Charlotte, Raleigh, Wilmington, and Doubles other places, the agitators are constantly at work, stirring up the pure minds of the colored race by way of remembrance of the wrongs and oppressions which they have suffered at the hands of the whites. In this city the emissaries are busily engaged; and it is stated that between one hundred and fifty and one hundred and eighty colored people have signed an agreement as members of this emigration association. The National Association will hold a meeting in Washington during the extra session of Congress, and memorialize that body for assistance to enable them to carry out their design.

As a matter of course, this agitation comes from the worst element of the colored race—from men who, perhaps smarter than the majority of their fellows, seeing that the sceptre of political power has departed from the negro, seek to re-ignite the fires of hatred in his race to solidify it for future elections; or else determined to carry out the idea of emigration, hope thereby to reap a pecuniary reward at present and gain power in Liberia in future. Another strong probability in the case is that the leaders in this scheme have something of a Freedman's Bank project on foot, whereby, getting possession of the money which may be contributed for the maintenance of the association and for carrying the so-called purposes of the organization into effect, they may spirit it away and the dupes be left to whistle for their pro rata.

In any event, whatever may be the immediate or ultimate objects of these loud-mouthed emigrant agents, it is best for the honest and respectable portion of the colored race to give them a wide berth. The colored people had better stay here where they are. There is plenty of room in this country for both the whites and blacks, and there is no reason why the two races should have live together here happily and prosperously. It is the colored man's best guarantee that he will retain his civilization. Citizenship is so new to him that he has not yet come to understand the science of government; and left to himself, to govern himself, he would very probably degenerate in that state of barbarism in which his African forefathers were found by the godly men of New England who first brought them to America and sold them into slavery.

There is, in addition to this, every other reason why the colored people should not try this experiment, and none at all why they should. They and the whites understand each other; the whites need them and they need the civilizing and refining influences which they imbibe from association with a race their superior in learning and culture. Their personal and political freedom have been secured; now let them stay here and work out their future in a country and among a people where they know what obstacles and what advantages are before them.

GENERAL LEACH AGAIN. We are like the Raleigh Observer: "We will be honestly obliged to General Leach if he will define his position once more on the late Whig question, so that to say, if his definition of it will set it at rest." His first letter was a perfect caricature of language—"panoplies of truth," and "gems and monuments and crowns," but it was not altogether satisfactory on the "Old Whig" or "new party" questions. He has figured so extensively in Washington since that time, and his name has been mentioned so often, in connection with new political movements, that another letter from him is absolutely necessary before we can be happy. That letter is rendered all the more necessary by the following special dispatch from Washington to the Baltimore Gazette, of date the 3rd inst. "A special meeting was held here at the Capitol House on Saturday night last, presided over by J. M. Leach, of North Carolina. It was composed of Democratic politicians from the States of Texas, Missouri, Alabama, North Carolina, Kentucky, Maryland and Georgia. It was present, or about one to a State. They met to discuss the duty of the conservative element of the Southern Democracy toward the President's Southern policy. After a full expression of opinion it was decided that so far as the present policy is concerned, the Democracy can and must give it their support. At the same time the opinion prevailed that all talk about the party splitting and resolving itself into a Hayes party at the South, was not to be thought of. All those present were old-time Whites, and expressed themselves as opposed to the present Whig colleagues at the South. The meeting was merely informal, but another of more importance will be held here about the 20th of the month, just before the gathering of Democrats takes place at the White Sulphur. The intention is to have at the same time a large convention of the Whig elements to talk over the political questions of the day and take such action as seems advisable."

Davis' Flight.

How the Confederate President Escaped from the Capital and Where He Expedited to Go.

[General James H. Wilson in the Philadelphia Times.]

It is stated upon what appears to be good authority that Davis had, many weeks before Lee's catastrophe, made "the most careful and exacting preparations for his escape, discussing the matter fully with his cabinet in profound secrecy; and deciding that in order to secure the escape of himself and his principal officers, the Shenandoah should be ordered to cruise off the coast of Florida to take the fugitives on board. These orders were sent to the rebel cruiser many days before Lee's lines were broken. It was thought that the rebel fleet would make an easy and deliberate escape, and the agreement upon, as the communications with the Florida coast were at that time scarcely doubtful, and once on the swift sailing Shenandoah, the most valuable remnant of the Anglo-Confederate navy, "they might soon obtain an asylum on a foreign shore." When Davis and his companions left Richmond in pursuance of this plan, they believed they had secured a safe harbor only a short time longer. A few days thereafter the news of this expected calamity reached them, when they turned their faces again toward the South. Breckinridge, the Secretary of War, was sent to confer with Johnston, but found him only in time to assist in drawing up the terms of his celebrated capitulation to Sherman. The intelligence of this event caused the rebel chieftain to renew his flight, but while hurrying onward, some fatuity induced him to change his plans and to adopt the alternative of trying to push through the Southwest toward the region which he fondly believed to be under the domination of Forrest, Taylor, and Kirby Smith, and within which he hoped to revive the desperate fortunes of the rebellion. He confided his hopes to Breckinridge, and when he reached Abbeville, South Carolina, he called a council of war to deliberate upon the plans which he had conceived for regenerating what had now become in fact "The Lost Cause." This council was composed of Gens. Breckinridge, Bragg, and the commanders of the cavalry force which was then escorting him. All united that it was hopeless to struggle longer, but they added that they would not disband their chieftain to a place of safety. This was the last council of the Confederacy.

Sporting Uncertainties.

[From the Detroit Free Press.]

Brother Gardner had planned to celebrate the glorious Fourth by hunting snipe on the shores of St. Clair, but when he reached the race course the excitement drew him in among the spectators. It was noticed as he came down in the evening that his shotgun was missing, and he was asked to explain its absence. "I don't know anything," he sadly answered; but being pressed he went on:—"Well, after I got in dar and seed everybody puttin' up der money on de horses I reckoned I'd better scoop some greenhorn out'n five or ten dollars. I went over and took a look at de flyers. Bimeby I seed one dat pleased me and I made up to de driver and axed him if he meant to win de race. He said he'd go right by de wheelbarrow, and de lightning goes by a man wid a wheelbarrow and he'd come down de stretch home wid sparks of fire flying from de wheels."

"And you bet on that horse?" "Dat's wot I did, of course. I put up dat new shotgun agin $5, and when de eight-horses pranced up to de score I could feel dat $5 jumpin' right frew all my wings."

"Well, did your horse win?" "Not exactly—no unless de animal which comes in behind all de rest is de winner. When I seed him way back dar I yelled for de driver to put on de whip, but he never minded me, and a white man hit dis plug hat an awful smash. I believe dat horse was pulled. He don't seem to me dat he was given de lead, but he don't seem to me to be de reason dat his driver would tell me to bet on de horse if he didn't feel sure 'ob de race. What fer should he lie? What fer would be de object?" "So you've lost the gun?" "The gun dum gone. De feller wat I seed he walked right off like de biggest duke in Michigan, an' if a rash of cool air hadn't come along 'bout dat time I might 'a' sunk down on de grass to rise no moah. Ize feelin' better just now, an' ef I kin make de ole woman believe I los' de gun in de marsh I'll recover from dis shock as de years roll away."

THE NORMAL SCHOOL.—Gov. Vance and Treasurer Worth returned to the city yesterday morning, from a brief visit to the normal school now in session at Chapel Hill. These gentlemen express themselves as more than delighted at the success of the great enterprise. They report an attendance present of about 170 males and females. The daily exercises commence at 9 o'clock, a. m., and close at 6 p. m., with evening lectures twice during the week. The 170 teachers as pupils are divided into four sections and are lectured by the different professors alternately during the day, and a general lecture to the whole on the art of teaching, by Prof. Ladd, is given daily. There are weekly numbers of "doers." Wednesday evening Gov. Vance delivered a lecture on the agricultural capacity of this country in comparison with that of others. This lecture will be followed by others during the session. Maj. Robt. Bingham, Dr. Eugene Grissom, Prof. W. C. Kerr and others have already accepted appointments.

Yesterday's Raleigh Observer. AN OLD FASHIONED FOURTH.—"Oh, I'll have a blazing Fourth!" yelled a boy from the City Hall steps yesterday at another in the yard. "Going to shoot off your mouth?" sneered the other. "No, I ain't going to shoot off my mouth, but I've got a fine cacker as big as your leg, 200 torpedoes, six old maskets, an' a skyrocket. Mammy'd de stove biler yesterday for lemons an' sugar, deater de wind trying to pick up greenberries for a pie, we've got de dead thing on a yearling chicken, and if you want to see de Goddess of Liberty turn handspindles over de clothes line you come around' and look through the alley fence."—Detroit Free Press.

Haywood W. Guion, Esq., and Habeas Corpus.

[From the Charlotte Democrat, 13th.]

Editor Democrat: While listening to the splendid apostrophe of Judge Fowle on the Hon. George W. Brooks for his noble discharge of judicial duty in rescuing the Kirk prisoners from the despotic grasp of cruel conspirators; my mind ran hurriedly over the exciting scenes of that memorable period, and paused to pay homage to one whose name has never been publicly connected with those events, but who really deserves the credit for that great deliverance. I refer to Haywood W. Guion, Esq., of Charlotte, N. C.

The facts are these: That after every argument and every appeal to the Supreme Court Judges of North Carolina had failed, and they had formally announced their "judicial exhaustion," and all hope had fled and no further expedient could be suggested by the numerous distinguished counsel who were employed by the Kirk prisoners, and when the writ for a writ of habeas corpus to the organization of the court martial which was to hurry the citizens of Caswell to an ignominious death, Mr. Guion arrived in Raleigh on other business, but was soon called into consultation and asked if he could suggest any further proceeding, which might promise success. After reflecting a moment his face lighted with a smile and he replied that the writ of habeas corpus to be issued by a Federal Judge whenever any prisoner alleged he was imprisoned without "due process of law." The petitions were hastily prepared, presented to Judge Brooks and the writ issued which resulted in the release of the prisoners.

These facts are known to but few gentlemen of the profession. Judge Battle, who was one of the original counsel for the Kirk prisoners, will confirm the statement made in this article. I could but wish that Judge Fowle, who paid such a glowing tribute to these facts, that he might link the name of Haywood W. Guion with this grand struggle for human liberty and constitutional freedom.

I will add for the information of those who did not know Mr. Guion personally, that he was a learned man in his profession and but very few men in North Carolina were his equal, and none superior, as a constitutional lawyer. Guion's suggestion and Brooks' courage arrested one of the most diabolical political crimes that corruption and cruelty had ever prepared for a free people, and began the political revolution which destroyed the power of Radicalism in the State. D. S.

In the Russian army there is only one band to each division, and it affords music at intervals, but the spirits of the men are cheered on the way by their own songs, in which they give vent to their enthusiasm with a good-will and melodious expression which is quite enviable. At the head of each battalion are three drummers, and in the van are generally a score or more of good singers. First one strikes up a solo, whose not unpleasant air is listened to in silence, and then the company in unison and harmony take up the chorus; the drummers and soloists take the refrain twice along the whole line in a manner which is emphatically warlike and grand. Sometimes where the musical element is strong and solo singers rare, a soldier with a clarinet plays the solo, then all the others, with the drums, take up the chorus. The songs are often very spirit-stirring, and the heartiness with which they are rendered tells how deeply the feelings are affected by the music. The spirit in which they are marching to meet the enemy. The singing is maintained through the march, and the effect is as pleasing as it is inspiring.

"Making Old Bones." People who neglect their minor ailments rarely live to make old bones. The secret of hale and vigorous old age lies not only in taking care of one's health in early life, but by the observance of sanitary rules, but also by judicious medication when the premonitory symptoms of disorder manifest themselves. Indigestion, bowels and liver complaints, are fruitful causes of injury to the constitution. These diseases should be, therefore, checked without delay. The best medicine for the purpose is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This standard preparation disciplines the digestive organs, gives renewed impetus to the bilious secretive function, and exerts a beneficial influence upon the organs of urination. It has no rival as a remedy for and preventive of chills and fever and bilious remittents, infuses vigor into the debilitated frame, and is an excellent appetizer and nerve tonic.

MURDER WILL OUT. A few years ago "Anquet Flower" was discovered to be a certain cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, a few thin Dyspeptics made known to their friends how easily and quickly they had been cured by its use. The great merit of Green's August Flower became heralded through the country by one sufferer to another, until, without advertising, its sale had become immense. Druggists in EVERY TOWN in the United States are selling it. No person suffering with Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Costiveness, palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Irritability, can take three doses without relief. Go to your Druggist, T. C. Smith, and get a bottle for 75 cents and try it. Sample bottles to cents.
