It seems the judge of the district, while presiding at a murder trial, temporarily vacated his seat, and with the consent of the prisoner's counsel, placed a well known member of the bar in his stead. The prisoner was convicted; but appealed his case to the Supreme Court of the State, which held that the absence of prisoner nor his counsel could make the substitute of another man legal by their consent. The higher court has therefore decided that the accused has had no legal trial, and that the ceremony will have to be gone over one more before his guilt or innocence can
