Two things in nature are detestable—A girl who is trying to be a woman, and a woman trying to be a girl.

Stephen Lockwood and wife, an aged couple, were struck by a train while driving over the Lake Shore railroad near Painesville, Ohio, Thursday, and instantly killed.

It makes a boy heart-sick as the winter's wood begins to loom up in steadily growing piles in the back-yard, and to see his mother making preparations for organizing him into a workingman's party.

Some of the Virginia negroes are making a new departure in politics. At a recent celebration of the colored people in King George county, they refused to hear political speeches, and declared they favored good men for all offices, irrespective of party.

A tramp up North ate a bucket of hallow-sticker's paste, and they made him swallow a circus poster, and then turned him inside out with a stomach pump, and set him up to dry.

Mr. James Gordon Bennett is described by a London correspondent as looking exceedingly well, as driving about that city after a beautiful black horse, and as inundated with invitations to balls and garden parties by the nobility and gentry.

Gen Howard was sitting in his tent the other evening, when his partner led the seven of clubs. His right-hand opponent immediately played the queen of that suit, which was a bad play, when Howard flung out a picture and said: "I guess my Chief Joseph can scalp your squaw."

The taste for fruit trimmings for hats and dresses has pressed into the service of fashion all the larger kinds of fruit, which are copied on a reduced scale. Peaches, pears, apples, apricots, mandarin oranges, lemons and plums, and a large variety of tropical fruits, are much worn.

The crop of "tidies" is unusually large this year. The ladies have made a great improvement in this article, and can now cover the back of a two-dollar-and-a-half chair with a wonderful mass of silk, satin, lace and embroidery, costing fifteen or twenty dollars. Experienced, far-sighted men are laying in a stock of camp stools, so as to have a chance to sit down this winter.

"Lon" Hubbell, "the strong man of the word," once well known in the circus arena, is in the poor house of Putnam county, N. Y. In his time he could hold back two yoke of oxen, and support a weight of 1,800 pounds resting on his arched hands and feet with his stomach upward.

The board of managers of the Lee Memorial Association at Richmond, Va., have extended the time for receiving models for the proposed Lee monument, to the 1st of November. Four models have already been received, and it has been decided not to allow them to be seen until the committee meets in November next to make the award.

The photographing of the horse Occident, while trotting, in San Francisco, was mentioned in this column. The photographer is now preparing to make a series of pictures, showing the horse at every phase of his gait. Twelve cameras will be placed in a row, two feet apart, and will be exposed in succession by an electric apparatus exactly as the horse is opposite them.

The conference of free traders which was held at Saratoga, Friday, we are disposed to regard as one of the most notable events of the past week. There are at the head of this free trade movement, as appears from the proceedings of the Saratoga meeting, gentlemen of well-known personal and business characters, and with their combined influence, it is exercised vigorously and in the proper direction, they will shortly find themselves at the head of no small army of followers in the United States.

The latest reports about the famine in East India more than confirm the first accounts. Already half a million of people have died of starvation, and the rate of death continues to such an alarming extent that it is officially computed that the population more or less afflicted by famine numbers 24,000,000, "at least one-sixth of which will die even in the most favorable circumstances."

Simon Cameron is unhappy. He has been intently studying the political situation, especially as to Ohio, and Pennsylvania, and concludes that the Republican chances are slim in both States. If Ohio goes Democratic, which it is sure to do—in October, Simon says there is no way of preventing Pennsylvania from following the same course in November, Simon says "thumbs down."

FIAT JUSTITIA.

Our esteemed contemporary of the Petersburg (Va.) Index and Appeal always carries a level head, and while its editorials are invariably thoughtful and weighty, the article in its issue of Thursday last, under the caption above, is better than its average and should, as it doubtless will, challenge the attention of the press generally, not only in Virginia, but elsewhere. Beginning with the observation that a duty of a peculiarly grave nature will soon devolve on the press fraternity of Virginia (and it might have added of North Carolina and of nearly every other State) from which it sincerely hopes the fraternity will not tamely or weakly shrink, our contemporary further remarks by way of introduction: "If the frosts have not yet fallen, the hail has, and a remarkable change in the temperature is everywhere reported. It is reasonable to suppose that in a short space of time the mountain and sea-side resorts will begin to disgorge the crowds that fled to them for shelter, comfort and privacy during the prevalence of the dog-star heats. In the train of these returning voyagers and visitors will come an individual, with whom it will be the duty of the journalist of Virginia to deal summarily and severely." And here again after Virginia we move to amend by inserting North Carolina.

After this preliminary the Index and Appeal dives into the heart of its subject and proceeds to pile up these "vigorous sentences:

"We allude to the individual who writes the springs letters; who describes the quantity, quality, length, breadth, width, depth and train of the exquisite robes that, in this case, and who narrows how that, in this case, of Miss Q was grace, and in all her motions dignity and love; with all the other odds and ends of millinery and emotional poetry that go to the composition of a Jenkins epistle.

"Ordinarily, when a member of the press gang commits any offence against its etiquette and its ethics, the easy procedure against him is to expel him from the membership of the honorable body. But the man who writes the springs letters is not generally amenable to this treatment as he does not belong to the profession. Whilst the honest editor is still faithfully toiling at his desk, no matter whether the mercury has soared to four thousand Fahrenheit in its tube, or has sunk so low that whisky has to be cut into chunks with a hatchet, the fellow that hangs on the outskirts of the profession and who no more belongs to it than Satan belonged properly to the Garden of Paradise, is masquerading around at public resorts, riding on free tickets, accommodated with free quarters, imposing on everybody's good nature with whom they come into contact, and leaving the fraternity responsible for actions of which, indeed, its members only hear at second hand and then with deep disgust and indignation.

"Since, then, the writer of the springs letter cannot be expelled, the stern obligation devolves on the press gang to kill him immediately on his return. This is a hard and painful necessity, but unless it is done with all the deliberation and gravity that the case requires, there is no telling to what extent the nuisance will be carried. It is not now so bad as it used to be; it is not now so bad as it will become if permitted and encouraged. The evil has attained those convenient dimensions which admit of its extinction on facile condition, and in reasonable time, by the knocking on the head of a few correspondents. Humanity demands that the sacrifice should be made; and the interests of all journalism echo the requisition."

This is the way to talk it. There is no excuse for mincing matters when it comes to a case of this kind. If these Jenkins had to bear alone the contempt of the sensible portion of the reading public, we would care nothing at all about it; but it is a deplorable fact that a great many of even sensible people do not discriminate between the newspaper and its correspondent; between the journalist and the fellow "that hangs on the outskirts of the profession," and so the journal and the profession generally get the contempt which properly belongs to the correspondent, while the latter gets the free board and the free board.

Aside from all this there is a society view of the question. Jenkinsism is a plant of Northern growth. Under the Northern skies it has flourished and grown great—so great, indeed that it has extended its branches southward and threatens to reach over the land. The evil is a great and crying one. Our people, our ladies, despise it now, but there are grounds for fearing that they see it too often for that.

"Grow familiar with its face, And first endure, then pity, then embrace." The idea, then, is to nip it in the bud. If the killing of Jenkins, as our contemporary suggests, is involved in the killing of Jenkinsism, then so much the worse for Jenkins; but we must not stand back on that account. The infection must not be allowed to spread, and in order to prevent this, we had better strike at the root of the matter and destroy it utterly, root and branch, wherever it is found among us.

The news as to the condition of Morton is conflicting. We conclude that he will get well, and this opinion is based not so much upon what the newspapers and the telegraph say about it as upon our own knowledge of the fact that he is not the kind of a man to die.

It seems to be now well established that the disease which has been raging for a week or two past at Ferdinand, Fla., is nothing short of yellow fever. This news will probably cause something of a panic along the Atlantic coast. People in the interior, however, have no grounds to fear a visit from the scourge.

Barr, the press agent, has gone and got funny again within the past few days. Indeed, Barr is getting so funny here lately for a man in his line of business.

The Winston Sentinel, usually full of local news, falls a little short this week. Having left off the following, it is supposed that the local man got sick: Most of the farmers are now affected by cerebral influences, and business is pressing.

Raleigh News: During the month of August the State Treasurer issued drummers' licenses to houses located as follows: Philadelphia, 3; Richmond, Va., 4; Norfolk, Va., 5; New York, 1; Wilmington, N. C., 1; Charlotte, N. C., 1.

Here's father Evans of the Milton Chronicle: Augusta, Ga., invites President Hayes to visit that city, in his Southern tour, and we hereby invite him to put off his trip until the Milton & Sutherland Narrow Gauge Railroad is completed, and give us a passing call.

Winston Sentinel: There are over six hundred thousand dollars invested in the tobacco business in Winston at present. When we take into consideration the fact that less than five years ago there was no tobacco business here at all, it is strong proof that our town is beyond doubt, to be the leading tobacco market of the State.

The Winston Sentinel states that a Texan, recently overhauled in Ashe county, with a horse he had hired from a stable at Lynchburg, shot two of his pursuers, but let the third one off; shot one right over the heart, his suspender buckle turning the ball which glanced down, and came out at the hip. The second he shot through the jaw. Then got off.

Wilson Advance: Asa Harrell, a gay and dapper sportsman, buckled on the matrimonial harness for the fifth time on Tuesday last—Miss Sidney Williams, a maiden of 25 was the bride. This was a case of true love—filthy lucre had no hand in making the match; for Mr. Harrell went to the poor house to select his companion to share the joys of his home, and smooth the wrinkles of his declining years.

Rockingham Spirit of the South: Handy Graham, colored, who resides in Wolf Pit township, was bitten on the leg by a rattlesnake a few days ago. The snake had four rattles. Dr. John M. Shansill of this place, was called to see the unfortunate man, from whom we learn that Handy will likely recover, notwithstanding the wounded limb is swelled to twice its usual size, the patient being unable yet to sit up a minute without fainting.

A DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—Last Sunday evening an accident happened to a little girl residing with her step-father, Isaac Lowe, Esq., at Beattie's Ford, that came near proving fatal. The child's name is Sallie Cole; she was whittling with a sharp knife on the porch at Mr. Lowe's residence, when she suddenly jumped to the ground and in the action plunged the sharp blade of the knife in her body, about six inches below her ribs, on her right side, cutting up to the rib, inflicting a gash six inches long, out of which her bowels protruded as large as a half gallon measure. Mr. Lowe carried her into the house, and sent for Dr. McLean, Rozell and Sherrill, who dressed the wound. At last account the little girl was doing well.—Concord Register.

THE RAYNER-SOTELDO FRAGAS.

The Case Before Justice Mills—A Statement from Both Parties—Judge Rayner Fined $20.

(Special correspondence of the Observer.) WASHINGTON, September 5, 1877.

A large crowd assembled at the police court this morning to witness the trial of Solicitor Kenneth Rayner, of the Treasury, for assault and battery on Mr. Soteldo, managing editor of the Republic of this city. The assault in question took place on the east front of the Treasury building on Monday last at about 5 o'clock in the evening. From the evidence adduced at the trial it would seem that Mr. Soteldo and some friends were standing midway the steps, when Mr. Rayner, who was returning home from his office in the Treasury building, espied Soteldo, and with the remark "Get out of my way, you damned scoundrel," made at Mr. S., at the same time dealing him a blow in the face. Mr. S. defended himself, and in the scuffle that ensued the Solicitor was thrown down some seven steps. The Solicitor renewed the attack, but the combatants were separated with but little injury to either. Mr. S. swore out a warrant for Mr. Rayner, hence the trial.

Mr. Rayner appeared before Justice Mills, accompanied by a large number of friends. Ex-Senator Pool acted as his counsel, and entered the plea of guilty. The Solicitor showed but little traces of his recent encounter. His face was a little flushed, but with that exception he looked as usual. Mr. Miller appeared for Soteldo. After some legal sparring as to whether Mr. Rayner should be allowed to read a statement which he had prepared for the court, the court assented, and Mr. Rayner began his recital. In his statement Mr. Rayner says that the whole affair originated in his opinion in the Grow case. Grow was arrested on the charge of forgery. His counsel applied to Secretary Sherman to have the case of forgery against his client dismissed. As Solicitor of the Treasury, the case, with the accompanying papers, was referred to Mr. Rayner for his opinion. This he gave. It was adverse to Grow. Previous to his giving this opinion, however, Mr. Soteldo, a friend of Grow, called on Mr. Rayner in his office in the Treasury building and tried to persuade Mr. R. to give an opinion favorable to Mr. Grow. This Mr. Rayner said he could not promise. He should decide according to the strict letter of the law. Mr. S. then said that unless he decided to release Grow the press would be down on him. From the time that his decision was rendered up to Monday the Republic has printed scurrilous paragraphs concerning Mr. R., and to which Mr. R. took exception.

Soteldo is a large, handsome man, of splendid physique, prominent nose, black, piercing eyes, and has a small, toothy, slightly crooked grin. He is said to be of Cuban descent. His statement differs from Mr. Rayner's in the material fact that he says Mr. R. had given him a verbal promise that Mr. Grow should be released, and had then given a written opinion directly contradictory. He acknowledged having written the paragraphs in question, and thought any sensible man would have taken them as they were intended—as jokes. This man Soteldo has had rather an unenviable career. He came here from New York, where he was engaged in various pursuits, among others assisting in the compilation of the Democratic text book, which was used so extensively in the presidential campaign. He also wrote some two or three of the most bitter articles that book contains, denouncing Hayes and his party. Since his connection with the "kitchen organ" it has been the subject of street talk that he offered to let up on the gamblers if they would give him a consideration, which, if they refused to do, he would make it warm for them. He did so. This is mere talk, and is given only as such.

The trial, which occupied some two hours, was concluded by the justice fining Mr. Rayner twenty dollars, remarking that a person who held a high station, both politically and socially, should set a better example.

The whole affair is regarded as unfortunate for Mr. Rayner. His friends think that he acted hastily, and that the best course would have been not to have noticed the article. The opinion seems to be that while he may have done wrong in striking Soteldo, yet it was no more than he deserved.

JOHNES SCRIBLERUS.

HOMICIDE IN ASHEBORO.—We are pained to learn by a telegram to a gentleman in this city that Henry Worth, a young gentleman 16 or 17 years of age, the grandson of Treasurer Worth, was shot and killed in Asheboro, Randolph county, yesterday. No particulars were received except that the murderer was one Ed. Wilson, and that he fired at young Worth when times before the fatal wound was given. Dr. Worth left for home this morning.—Raleigh News of yesterday.

[Passengers who arrived in Charlotte by the down train yesterday, report that the young man was living when the train passed High Point.—Observer.]

RESIGNED.—The following members of the General Assembly have sent in their resignations to Gov. Vance: W. N. Mebane, Senator from Rockingham; I. F. Dortch, Senator from Wayne, and J. K. Davis, Representative from Lenoir. The latter gentleman was elected sheriff to supply the vacancy occasioned by the death of Sheriff Becton, and the two former were elected solicitor of the Inferior Court for their respective counties.—Raleigh Observer.

Health on a Sure Basis. In order to establish health on a sure basis the unfeebled system must acquire additional vigor. And yet, patent as this fact is, and widely known as it is, too many people neglect this vital point in the self-care of the system, and physicians are very often equally remiss, resorting to use of palliatives which affect symptoms only, and fail to accomplish the chief end in view, which is, or should be, invigoration. The main reason why Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are so successful in overcoming disease is that they impart vitality where it is deficient, and thus build up a superstructure for exhausted nature to recuperate upon. The Bitters also improve the appetite, soothe the nervous system when overstrained, and are a general and agreeable medicinal stimulant, with a basis of pure spirits holding in solution botanic elements of the greatest efficacy.
