A lady with a fatal squint came once to a fashionable artist for a portrait. He looked at her and she looked at him, and both were embarrased. He spoke first. "Would your ladyship permit me," he said, "to take the portrait in profile? There is a certain shyness about one of your ladyship's eyes which is as difficult in art as it is fascinating

Hon Kenneth Rayner, solicitor of the Treasury, has been presented with a handsome walking-cane by a prominent resident of one of the eastern counties of Virginia. The cane was made of a portion of the Confederate ram Merrimse, and the handle is in the form of a miniature cannon, constructed from a portion of one of the Merrimac's guns. The solicitor greatly prizes this memento from a friend whom he had known in more prosperous days.

The Duchess' Letter.

[Hawkeye.] The following fragment of a private letter from the young duchess of Edinburgh to the old settler on West Hill has fallen into our hands. It indicates very plainly the domestic troubles that cloud the skies:

cloud the skies:

"I am having the hardest time trying to keep peace in the family. My mother-in-law is just one of the dearest of women, but she and papa have fallen out about something and are quarreling so dreadfully that eyen the neighbors are beginning to talk about it. I am so mortified and distressed I don't like to go out of the house. Papa is dreadfully angry and seems to forget like to go out of the house. Papa is dreadfully angry and seems to forget that my husband's mother is a woman, and says if she tries to meddle with his affairs, he'll break every bone in her body. And my poor dear husband is so tormented and badgered between their quarreling and my weeping, he is almost crazy. He has gone away in his ship and says he is afraid if pa doesn't talk more repectfully to his mamma, he will pound St Petersburg down about his ears. And when brother Nicholas heard of it, he said if my husband came fooling round, he'd put a torpedo under his old mud scow that would hump him over the moon. Oh, I am so miserable. over the moon. Oh, I am so miserable. It is a dreadful way to live. The other day one of Edinburgh's sisters looked very hard at me, right at the dinner table, and said that between the rats and the Russians, one couldn't keep a candle about the house long enough to light it, and the very next day I got a box from brother Alexis, with a letter requesting me to distribute the conrequesting me to distribute the contents among my husband's family, with his compliments. And I supposed it was a peace offering of some kind, and called the family in to see it opened, and what do you think? It contained about a bushel and half of wooden 'H's.' Such a scene. Ma'ma was so argry she had a peace meeting called in the park right away and five called in the park right away, and five men were pounded nearly to death, and

Congressional Grief and Poetry.

[New York Sun.] We don't know why death and poetry should be associated ideas in the congressional mind. But they are. No sooner does a member of that body die than his bereaved associates-a least those of them who are to make speeches about him turn to the Muses for consolation in their bereavement, and cull chaplets of verse to deck

On last Thursday, for instance, the House of Representatives knocked off work to listen to a recital of the public and private virtues of the late Mr J Edwards Leonard of Louisiana. Nine member spoke, and the report of their speeches takes up a little over seven and a half pages in the Congressional Record. In these seven and a half pages we find by actual count twenty speaker dropped into poetry at least once; Mr Ward three times; Mr Calkins five times.

By an unlucky coincidence of taste, two of them, Messrs Calkins and Dun-nell, had selected as a closing quotation certain not unfamiliar lines which assert that leaves have their time to fall, flowers to wither, stars to set, but that people die all the year round without regard to the seasons. Mr Calkins get the floor first, and delivered these ines in his most impressive manner. Under the circumstances some men in Mr Dunnell's place would have suppressed the quotation. Mr Dunnell is made of sterner stuff, and the House had the opportunity of comparing his rendering of the lines with that of Mr

We advise these obituary orators in search of poetical quotations to turn their attention to the writings of G. Washington Childs, A. M., Philadel-phia's gifted elegiac bard. In his beautiful productions they will find the feelings and the language of grief itself, all framed in a solemn and noble style of imagination, with nothing hackneyed or commonplace to shock the sad emotions of the hour. Ah, Childs is a lovely poet, even when treating of the tomb!

Whence His Wealth.

[From the California Advertiser.] One of the richest Chinamen in this city is doubtless Mr Chew Kow Yup, who came to this city a penniless Mongolian thief about seven years ago. All his wealth has been obtained by committing to memory four simple words, "You savee me leper." The second night after his arrival he broke into a dry goods store and was just carrying away his booty when a police-man collared him, and prepared to march him down to the City Hall. He made no resistance but innocently remarked, "You save me leper," and Officer Mulligan fled wildly toward North Beach giving his prisoner the opportunity to steal seven more un-dershirts, of which he promptly avail-ed himself. He was only once brought into court, then being charged with a wholesale diamond robbery, and when asked to plead guilty or not guilty, he war, have arranged to present in the Academy of Music, in that city, on Thursday and Friday evenings of this week, the spectacular pantomine, "The Sleeping Beauty," in grand style, the proceeds of which will go to awall the fund which the managers of the Mount Vernon Aid Society have been for three years raising for the purchase and maintenance of the Washington estate. It is intended that the society shall raise $100,000, which is to be invested, as that which is already collected is in government bonds, the interest of which is to support the estate at Mount Vernon.

New York, April 21 .- A special dispatch from Paris to the Herald has the following from a person who professes to have an intimate acquaintance with the Vatican: "I hear that a movement is on foot which promises to be the most important event in the religi-ous history of this century. This is nothing less than secession in large bodies of the members of the English Protestant Church to the Roman Catholic Church. The number of seceders is placed at as high a figure as 3,000,000 of people. Included in this exodus from the Church of England are bish-ops, rectors, curates, and deacons. Authorized delegates, it is ascertained, are now in Rome negotiating conditions upon which secession will take

Why the Gas Burned Low.

When a Fulton father came home the other evening and stepped into the parlor to fill up the coal stove, he was startled to see, when the flame of his hand lamp dissipated the darkness, that his daughter and her ducky doe die Adolphus were sojourning in the shadow of the lowered gas jet. But they were in separate chairs! And were engrossed in a box of figs! He falt compalled to ask. "Separate the all the windows in the street were brofelt compelled to ask : "Something the matter with the gas?" And the time-tried youth, grasping one of the golden thoughts that overwhelm us in the time of emergency, answered, as he mechanically picked up another fig: "No sir, we turned it down so as not to notice when we bit into a worm!"

Would is not be well for fair minded men, irrespective of party, who desire honest government and low taxes, to contrast this action of a Democratic board with the Radical management as few years back? This is a sample of the reform that Democratic governments are bringing about all over the country, from Congress down to the smallest bodies.
