A Lady Supposed to be Dear Rises up and Speaks

[Richmond Whig, 26]

Some months ago, in old German lady, Mrs Heiliz, was taken as an inmate of the Home of the Little Sisters of the Peor. She were very popular with the inmates of Lat institution, and during her stay made many friends. About two weeks since Mts Heiliz, who had been in had health, grew suddenly quite ill. During her illness she received every attention from the good Sisters, and all that medical aid could do to alleviate her suffering was done. The grew worse, however, and some of the physicians came to the conclusion that she could not live much longer.

Last Saturday night, the died and weeled out Sunday night, the body was by the side of the corpse. At mid-night the clock struck 12. The Sisters did not grow weary in their faithful watch over the dead sister. Suddenly, as they looked upon the face, still in death, the sunken eyes appeared to flash, the blood came back to the faded cheek, and, as though imbued with superhuman energy, the dead body rose up from its resting place, which was draped with black pall, emblematical movements and applications. tig of mourning, and spoke to the affrighted watchers, saying:

There were two well defined classes -officers of the court, who were store clothes and new hats with a jaunty swagger that indicated satisfaction with things in this world, while the others were clad in rough homespun and old hats, with a careworn look. Many of these latter, we were told, had made long marches on foot to reach the court (having no means to pay trans-poration) and brought with them their old haversacks filled with cooked pro-

As none of the others made complaint we suppose they had done better. We could not but reflect that $330 would buy 800 bushels of corn in these woods, which was a better crop made in four days than the gentlemen on the other side would make during the year.

When these unhappy victims get through with paying the court costs, each will find himself about one year's Mr Hayes says he is going to give a part of the Presidential salary for campaign purposes.
