H. T. BUTLER.

She was only sixteen; she was pretty; Her foot was bewitchingly small! Her father was "warm," as the phrase is, And, fact most delightful of all, I had reason to think, as I fancied,

That she was attracted by me, Let the time, if you please, be last summer The scene at St. John, in N. B.) I was there on a pleasure excursion,
Had found it exceedingly tame!
Had reviled both the place and the people In terms I'd be sorry to name; When it chanced I met with this charmer

You'll excuse my not mentioning.how; Suffice it to say that her father (I can taste his Madeira e'en now,) Knew some of my friends or relations, And, in hearty Canadian style, Declared me his guest for a fortnight And would take no denial the while.

And she? O, she blushed and said nothing,

But she looked so deliciously sweet, I'd have gone if he lived in the almhouse,

Instead of on Oliver street. We'll omit the events of my visit: Enough, that with rapture I burned, And, as mentioned before, I had causes For believing my love was returned; And we'll come without further preamble To the story I started to tell, Of the service she asked me to do her,

She said she'd a cousin in Boston To whom she'd some trifle to send; And (here came the daintiest blushes) Regarding me quite as a friend, She asked, as a very great favor, That I'd take a trunk under my care, And then, I consenting, she gave me---I won't tell you what I declare.

And the fate that my efforts befell.

We were just coming up Boston harbor When a man in blue flannel came round And, demanding the keys of their owners, Examined what baggage was found. Imagine my paraful emotion

When in very gruff tones I was told That the duties on what that trunk carried Would be ninety-eight dollars in gold.

I paid it--it took all my money And some that I borrowed---before That trunk was released from its durance And allowed to be carried on shore. And the warning I wish to inculcate On all who this episode con Is to never bring trunks up to Boston pers the wind to the shorn lamb," shed tears, it is said, over a dead jackass. It is also said that he broke his wife's heart. It is enough to break any wife's heart when her husband weeps over a departed jackass.

Jonathan Walker, the noted abolitionist hero of Whittier's poem, "The man with the Branded Hand," died last Friday in Muskegon, Michigan, in great poverty. For attempting to free slaves he was captured in Florida, imprisoned, pilloried and branded on the right hand with the letters S. S., or Slave Stealer. He was born in 1779, and was long noted as one of the most vehement of abolition and anti-slayery lecturers.

"Little Breeches" Hay is still Harte-ty, though his name long ago disappeared from the newspapers. The Herald says: "Col. John Hay, once Private Secretary to Lincoln, afterward poet, then on the staff of the Tribune, and eventually the happy husband of a sweet and wealthy wife at Cleveland, is spending a day or two at Philadel-

Eli Perkins says on his tickets of admission: "In case of an accident to the lecturer, or if he should die or be hung before the evening of the disturbance, this ticket will admit the bearer to a front seat at the funeral, where he can sit and enjoy himself the same as at the lecture." This explains the rush to hear Mr. Perkins. The too sanguine public foolishly bases its hopes upon that delusive "if."

Frivolous Duels.

[Washington Capital.] Col Montgomery was shot in a due1 about a dog; Colonel Ramsey in one and terms. about a servant; Mr Featherstone in one about a recruit; Sterne's father in one about a goose, and another gentleman in one about an acre of anchovies. One officer was challenged for merely asking his opponent to enjoy the second goblet, and another was compelled fight about a pinch of snuff. General Barry was challenged by a Captain Smith for declining wine at dinner on a steamboat, although the General had pleaded as an excuse that wine invariably made him sick; and Lieutenant Cowther lost his life in a duel because he refused admittance to a club of pigeon shooters. In 1777 a duel occurred in New York city between Lieutenant Featherstonehaugh of the Seventy-sixth and Captain McPherson of the Forty-third British regiment, in regard to the manner of eating an ear of corn—one contending that the best eating was from the cob, and the other that the grain should be cut off from the cob before eating. Lieutenant Featherstonehaugh lost his right arm; the ball from his antagonist's pistol shattered the limb dreadfully, so that it had to be amputated. Political State Items.

Col B F Little, of Richmond, declines o run for the Senate.

Mr J T LeGrand was elected mayor of Rockingham without opposition.

The judicial convention of the fourth district will be held at Fayetteville, June 5th, to nominate a candidate for solicitor.

A Pamlico county correspondent of the Wilmington Review wants to send Governor Vance to the Senate and make Hon A M. Waddell Governor next time.

Catawba's delegates to the State convention go up uninstructed.

The Salisbury Watchman warns the Democrats of Rowan that the Radicals of that county are playing a wily game; that they intend to bring out and support "independent" Democrats for the Legislature.

The Salisbury Watchman says that if the Democrats of Rowan have to vote for a "dark horse" for the congressional nomination, their ballots will be cast, probably, for Mr Kerr Craige.

The Reduction on the Tobacco Tax.

[Washington Special to Richmond Despatch, 14th inst.]

My information that tobacco-reduction is stronger to day than when the vote was taken over a week ago comes from those best posted in regard to the subject. Its opponents are working industriously and quietly, and their habit is to select individual members and flood them with memorials and circulars setting forth that the revenue cannot stand a reduction to sixteen cents; that the heaviest manufacturers are against it; and that the consumer pays the tax. To connteract the operations of wealthy monopolists will require the hardest work. The reductionists, however, have the right and the argument both on their side, and this makes them hopeful.

Secret of a Fair Face.

An Item of Interest to Every Lady who Desires to be More Beautiful than she now is.

Unfortunately not one woman in a hundred, subjected to the whins of an American climate possesses that basis and starting point of real beauty—a pure and clear complexion. What nature has thus denied, art must be called upon to furnish.

It can be done; it is done daily. Prof. W. E. Hagan placed beauty within the reach of every unblessed daughter of Eve when he discovered that surprising article known in fashionable circles as the true secret of beauty, and called rotund, and plump. It makes a matron of 35 or 40 look not more than 20 years old, and changes the rustic maiden into a cultivated city belle. The Magnolia Balm removes all blemishes and con-ceals every drawback to beauty; and, while it is as harmless as water, it is so life-like in its effects that the closest observer cannot detect its use.

Ladies who want to make themselves attractive can make an absolute certainty of it by using Hagan's Macroulla Balks, and we know of no other way. It is the cheapest preparation in the world, all things considered, and may be had at any drug store.
