The work on the mountains moves oravely on. The steel rails, Sampson bar, for six miles of track have arrived, and are now being placed in position.

These rails will make quite a difference in the running of the trains—being much better than those on the old bed.

The railroad officials are now making arrangements to have the road bed changed so as to run by Newton in-stead of having a branch road from Conover to that place as it is now. The convicts now at work on the Chester and Lenoir Narrow Gauge will be transferred to this road and work will transferred to this read and work will begin on the contemplated change about the first of June. This change will require the building of only a few miles of new road and will be quite an improvement over the present arrangement.
